

Brighton
Sept. 24 1836.

My dear Augustus
I have been intending to write to you for some days, as I thought, you might like to know how we are here, but my hand is still very weak & I cannot see to much

He got here very well and Adela is much improved since she has breathed the sea air, her strength however still requires her, however,

the Medical authorities advise her, she will not heartily suffer —

The Bishop of Worcester is here, he has been talking much of you & saying that he hears from everyone he wishes you were both about as the
 inf. Parish.

Adela comes down this morn. I have not seen him
 yet. We the rest are here. Augusta going with her husband to St. Paul's in England, and Miss Hope is now Augusta's friend.
