Dear Brother,

This morning Frederick wrote me the melancholy account of the death of our worthy uncle: from the intimacy and friend-ship that has so long subsisted between you two I can easily figure to myself your grief.

His goodness at all times to me I cannot forget: his fellow he certainly had the best heart in the world: I am glad to hear by Frederick the thing was so much hurt: but my dear Brother the Dutchess is to be pitied: her conduct will accounts was very exemplary: indeed her goodness has been manifested on all occasions. Do my dear brother in your peculiar way say every thing for me to this poor woman. I have wrote to her to it was an unpleasant task: see the letter and tell me if it was a proper one, and how she re-ceived it. I really esteem the Dutchess and feel for her weakness.

Adieu and ever believe me

Your's affectionately
P. H.
