British Headquarters.
Febt 21st 1814.
At night.

Dear Sir,

I am sorry to inform the Prince Regent has his reasons for my not going to the Great Headquarters and formal proceeding thereto Hanover or Stuttgart. I ought now to return to England. I have seen Willard have been over the greater part of Flanders have been able to pay more attention to the Prussian and our troops and shall make every effort to spending a week with the Prince of Orange and his family; unless some other is desirous of my going over into Germany. I have literally nothing more to do: and it is therefore my intention unless I receive fresh instructions from England to proceed on Sunday March the Sixth to Albeck to embark and I hope on Thursday the Ninth to arrive at Colchester Harbour.

I proceeded with the Duke of Württemberg to Vienna to see General Winkel and his fine division of Prussians who started yesterday and the Regiment of Infantry of Colberg are the chieftains of the Prussians: the Canadian Guard of Honour of the Pomeranian Regiment was marching and the attention paid me by General Winkel and all the Persian affairs was most marked: I returned the next day to Aspinwall in my wagon the field of battle of Fintang and met the men

- myself with Liverpool letter: the next night I slept at Liverpoole Russell Found Prince Paul of Württemberg a very handsome and very violent young man second to the King who showed his father to me in the strongest terms: at Liverpoole Russell, Capians and Samson
- der General Fellenz who likewise received me with the most marked attention: I did not get home till dark last night owing to the bad roads.
I have been unwell all today and unable to go out but am this evening much better: I carry tomorrow morning theiffuda to see his h. duc where I sleep: on Saturday go to examine for you and remain the night there and return Sunday morning to go to bat the Hague in time for the dinner of the Prince of Orange.

Living as Guards on military exercice. Have only to mark the King of Prussia has not only increased his country his army but the spirit and manners of his troops and it will be his own fault if he loses them again.
Admire whatever you see of the Prussian and their knowledge of the Army: I can not speak too brightly of the uniform and marked attention. I have experienced small marks of every description whenever I have been congratulated that the Government had well recompensed me and friends & help shown me by the Duke of Well-Wilmer.

Takes something very extraordinary success.
Please excuse fresh intrusions it is not my intention to trouble you anymore: Hoping my brother is quite recovered: adieu till some time and ever believe me.

Dear Sir:

Yours sincerely William H.

Duke of Clarence
