

Duke of Clarence

45240

Bushy House.
Thursday
Eight

Dear Sir,
I have no person so perfectly dis-agreeable and un-der-stand-able as an author. I enclose a letter and several pamphlets I have this evening received from a man I have not any knowledge of and to whom I do not mean to put pen to paper: but it may be as well to watch the pattern and therefore send his papers.
I question to whom depends on the Prince's Sentiments entirely: I shall be in London on Sunday at whatever hour you choose and shall be ready to accompany you either on the day or Monday to settle with Lord Carteret about the manner of my expenses being paid during my excursion:

Barton informs me there are difficulties star-ted by the Insurance Officers which I think ought to be got over as I may have occasion to return again next year to the Continent.
I am going to write to him and ever remain,

Dear Sir,
Yours sincerely
William P.