Dear Brother,

Sent for Mr. Mathew

all over the town to give him an account of what passed at St. James's this morning and not having found him I wrote my observations: the King was ordered to a gun salute and the Duke of Gloucester did not arrive till near two which agitated the King to that degree that he never called as it is termed: he forgot to see the Field Officers of the Guards and to give the Parade: he even sent a page and not the Lord in waiting for Lord Howe has been who had there the Page and not there the Lord asked an audience upon the Knight going out. The Lord he could hardly speak and seemed at first so not at all the astonishment of the noble and Duke John and never took his eyes off him the whole day. The rest of the evening he kept talking constantly and accepting just before he was cut off. The last time I ever saw him so laid: in having he had cut his face horribly.

Unless I shall hear from you I shall expect you to dinner at six tomorrow evening and to stay till the following Monday: if any thing occurs in the mean time I will write: I shall think what I can do by must have been so incident to every body that you will hear of it from other quarters.

Ever believe me,

I Dear Brother,

Yours most affectionately

William
