

mind is continually engaged with this cruel and unjust prosecution of the most perfect and injured woman that I really have not spirits to be present at the site of tomorrow and I shall only be a wet blanket to the company assembled at Cattani. I shall, however, write to the De-chope of York and indeed request the Deput to carry my letter.

I have much to say, you on the point in which not only my happiness but essentially my life and existence may be concerned: it will be hard indeed when my other brothers are in search of honour and employment &c. &c. that I must take
