Staford

I send with great regret the the election of a Trustee of the British Museum in the room of the late Duke of Sutherland is fixed for next Tuesday afternoon, the day I have promised the Duchess to leave London, as I was extremely anxious to have been present to prove my sincere satisfaction at your becoming one of the Trustees; I did not understand from the Arch Bishop of Canterbury that the Election is a mere matter of form & that your being appointed is perfectly certain I would, however inconvenient, have postponed my departure from Paris. I could not resist expressing to you my satisfaction at your becoming one of the Masters & my concern at not having an opportunity of doing so in person.

I trust you will be assured of the very high Esteem and very sincere Regard with which I am always My dear Sir Robert

Very truly Yours

My dear Matthew

Aldridge is in such a dreadful State of Health that he is perfectly useless to me; I shall therefore send him back as soon as you send me one of the stable People to receive him, which I wish you would be so good as to do as soon as possible, I enclose a Paper by which you will see what is the present State of things here to Crosme as I shall stay here till Monday I hope you will take care to let me have a Person down before Friday, but as Aldridge can scarcely do any thing the sooner his successor comes the better - I do not think the poor Boy will live, & I am apprehensive he will never be fit for me again as he is as dead as a Post - Now is Ash - 2 as Starr is the only effective from I have here, hence the prospect to let me know what you prefer upon the subject of business as I cannot go on in the present state.

As soon as the exchange between Hamilton & Craze is settled, best good as to give out a Royal order stating that I have appointed Craze to the second Post: viz Hamilton, & to direct Craze to forward Money or without delay of time.

I am with respect Dear Madam
