

10th Oct. 1779
Sunday Morning

My dearest; dearest; dearest; Sister, Friend,

I have according to my promise sent you back yr. Letters this Morning, I have looked yr. over & over again, the Letters I think are very affectionate & kind ones, & I find my sentiments so perfectly ^{in unison} ~~with~~ those contained in yr. Sonnet & Character yr. I fancy they must have been written by two persons whose hearts are very near yr. situation of mine. Dependant bissons ladespus, I shall however entreat of you to remind me of yr. name of Clementina, you told it me at W but it slipped out of my memory. But as for those of Clem. & of yr. writers of yr. Sonnet, & Character, my ^{mind} forbids my trespassing too much upon yr. generosity, especially as you have placed such implicit confidence in me, indeed more than I deserved, however I hope you will never find it greatly misplaced. As for me, my Miranda there is not a secret of my Soul, that I do not, that I have not disclosed to you, you have closely inspected my heart & my mind, & I hope you find neither of them bad. One passion I have which I forget to mention before in my Portrait, & which I think you may place among my virtues, that is, my affection to a Friend, (& to you most especially, as best of all my Friends,) which would carry me such lengths, y^t. I w^d. lay down my life most willingly for their service.

I am very sorry as Mrs. Carter has such weight with you, y^t. she disapproves so much of ye. Character of Tom Jones, especially as I compared it to mine, I thought I was paying a compliment to myself in so doing, you must however confess that there is great openness, frankness, generosity, spirit & gratitude, strongly marked in his character, yet I remember, when I made ye. comparison, & it struck me then, you was quite silent upon ye. subject, whereas I thought you wd. have sought at it & with yr. usual frankness have either told me that my character was better or worse than his, & I could not help thinking this very singular, however as I know you to be an odd unaccountable creature, it did not make much impression upon me.

Send you ~~some~~ ~~some~~ some Patterns which I beg you will keep as long as you have a mind, before you give me yr. opinion of yr. you may return yr. to me, either this E-g or I-w M-y or not tell I return from W- when I promise you, you shall have an account of every thing yt. papers at W- & during yr. absence, as well as of yr. blaze on I- & M- & friendship as you say is always sympathetick. I shall probably go & seat myself in yr. Chair, & brood over ye. many happy hours I have spent ~~there~~ in conversation with you, & shall say to myself, what tis here now wanting to make you happy? why my Miranda, without whom every thing to me is nothing. If you have any commands for, or any little thing to bring from W- & tell me & I will execute yr. commission. Adieu, Adieu.

Adieu, dearest, dearest, dearest, Sister, friend, Miranda,
Whatever becomes of me, wherever I am, or wherever I go, you are never absent from ye thoughts of

P.S. yr. ever sincerely affectionate Brother Philemon long lives & loves I believe in yr. track & what sort of company ye were with the said person.
