I never had a sight of my Soul, says the emperor Aurelius, and yet I have a great value for it, because it is discoverable by its operations; and, by my constant expe-rience of the power of God, I have a proof of his being, and a reason for my veneration.

Where shall we find a man that bears affliction, Great and majestic in his griefs, like Cato?
Heavens! with what strength, what steadiness of mind He triumphs in the midst of all his sufferings

How does he rise against a load of woes,

And thanks the gods than throw the weight upon him!

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 14th inst. in relation to the above mentioned matter. Discourses of morality, and reflections upon human nature, are the best means we can make use of to improve our minds, and gain a true knowledge of ourselves.

The first part of the manuscript is written in a very beautiful hand of cursive. The second part is written in a more modern hand. The third part is written in a very old hand of cursive. The fourth part is written in a very old hand of cursive. The fifth
 old hand of cursive.

Cicero hath observed, that no kind of men are more afraid of God, than such as pretend not to believe his being: these are the men who above all others are most liable to be affected with dread and trembling, more especially in the time of sickness, and the approaches of death.

The first of these is the

The present winter will be a most successful one for the sheep. The weather is much better than usual and the grass is growing well in many places. The sheep are in good health and the wool is of a fine quality. The present season is a most successful one for the sheep.

The first thing I did was to go to the office and see what was going on. I found everything in a state of confusion.
 The papers were all over the place and the files were completely out of order. I had to spend a great deal of time in the afternoon and
