By a Dispatch received this morning from Vice Admiral Collingwood dated off Cadix the 21st ultimo, it appears that on the preceding day the Enemy's fleet, consisting of 27 or 28 sail of the line, with several frigates, entered that harbour, after ineffectually chasing the small Squadron under the Vice Admirals' command.

On the 24th the Euryalus, by which this dispatch was transmitted, fell in with Sr Robert Calder's Squadron, 20 leagues N.W. of Cape S^t Vincent, to whom the intelligence was communicated.

On the 15.th the Goliath captured the La Torche of 10 guns & 196 men, one of the Squadron which captured the Manche & having 50 of her crew on board.

The Rochefort Squadron is said to have put into Ligo, & to have sailed again about the 21.st

The Ships of War, Transports & East India Ships sailed from Cork on the 28.th ultimo.

Information is received from Admiral Cornwallis that on the morning of the 30th ultimo His M^{ty} Frigate the Melampus, with the Wasp Sloop and a Gun Brig, cruising off the Penmarks, were chased by a French Squadron consisting of Ten Ships of different descriptions, which steered SSE, and supposed for Rochefort.

A Squadron of four line of battle Ships, four Frigates, and two Brigs are stated to have sailed from Vigo on the 18th, and appear to be the same as the above.

I could not but esteem it the highest honour & pleasure to receive this day a Letter from Weymouth Sept^r 5th, written by your Majesty's own hand. This shows that your Majesty's eyes are gaining strength; yet I fear, they must have been something strained by this exercise. I hope your use of them will be easier & more perfect every day.

It is very true what your Majesty saw in the public prints. The Archbishop of Canterbury did me the honour to come over to me at this place from Cheltenham. I had never seen him before; but his person & manner were much in his favour, and his conversation was very agreeable & discreet. I hope, & indeed have not the least doubt, that he will do your Majesty, & the Church, good service in this high station.

But I must not allow myself to detain your Majesty with more words at present. I only beg leave to repeat my ardent wishes that your Majesty may long live in the full enjoyment of all your faculties, ^{wh} are so constantly employed in the noblest service.

Sir

I have the Honor to transmitt to your Majesty the Annual Weekly and Monthly Returns together with the recommendations to Commissions which have fallen vacant during the last week for your Majestys approbation and signature.

There is nothing sufficiently interesting to report to your Majesty excepting that there is every reason to fear from the last accounts received from the West Indies by Lieutenant Colonel Wilson of the Royal Artillery who left Barbadoes the 25th of July that from the dangerous state of health in which he left his Wife in Ayres, very little hope can be entertained of his being ever alive. At all events from his extreme debility it will be I fear necessary to appeal a Successor to them immediately.

I can not conclude without returning Your Majesty my most humble thanks for all the kindness and favours which You was graciously pleas'd to confer ^{upon me} during the time that I was my duty to Your Majesty at Weymouth, and can only say that it shall ever be my first proud as it is my duty to make every effort in my power to prove myself not undeserving of the affection and protection of which Your Majesty has ever given me to in any proofs

Am. Guard September 20 1805

In laying before Your Majesty the usual Kitchley States and the recommendations for commissions reported vacant this week for Your Majesty's approval I have nothing to report to Your Majesty except that the official confirmation of Sir William Kings death is not yet received though by reports from Mr Kincaid there is every reason to believe that that will take place in the 1st of next July.

I have thought over with great attention the consideration which I had the honor to have before Your Majesty upon the subject of the expediency of employing any part of the British Force in cooperating with the Allies, the outcome upon

The Countess and by leave to a few years Majesty that I am ever and ever confirmed in my opinion of the inexpediency of it, and more especially of its forming a part of any Allied Army under a foreign General.

Though I can justly state that all the Regiments both of Cavalry and Infantry, mentioned in my letters to Lord Castlereagh, or put at this moment in Individual Corps, far from, yet in order to begin a Campaign and to carry it on with any fair prospect of success we have seen by fatal experience that there are many other most necessary arrangements required to put an Army in a state to take the field besides finding thereby the men, such as Magazine, Waggons, Horses &c both for the Artillery and Ammunition that no step has as yet been taken, and that with every zeal exerted and every means

The Duke of York
20 September 1855

11813 undoubtedly take a leisure time to collect.

We are now nearly at the end of September, and certainly after the middle of next month there is little or no chance, in the navigation of the Baltic, so that I should hardly think that our army of 100,000 men was in perfect readiness that the whole Corps could be supposed to cross at their destination before the Fleet actually sets in.

I do not in addition to this advert to the probability that such a naturally composed of troops coming to the Corps, who wholly unaccustomed to camp must make upon a whole Campaign in a climate so much more severe than their own.

With regard to any plan of operation without accurate information of the strength and state of preparation of the Armies of your Majesty's Allies, or indeed of the Powers who compose them, it is impossible to form any decided opinion.

Thus far however it appears clear that no considerable Body of Troops can be disembarked and expected to begin Active Operations, until they have had a certain time to make their necessary arrangements which I have before stated, and which therefore in my opinion totally preclude the probability of any serious attempt at landing in the Elbe or the Weser while the Enemy is in possession of the whole surrounding Country and consequently of all its resources.

With regard to the least consideration of their former & part of an Allied Army from the experience of all former wars I should deprecate such a measure most sincerely both for the Prussians and the German Legion there could be no doubt that they would be immediately exposed to the most hazardous service and sacrificed to save the Corps of the Sovereign with whom they would be obliged to cooperate, should it therefore be thought expedient to send the German Legion to Sweden this Autumn I trust that they would be left under 11814

The Command of the Officers when Your Majesty may please to appoint, in some quiet quarters when every exertion might be used to increase these numbers and get them for active operations in the Spring, and with the strictest orders not to give way to any application for paid holidays under the most impetuous and loyal circumstances.

I must, ^{Your Majesty} will excuse my having entered so fully into this subject but knowing the Interest Your Majesty takes in it, I thought it a duty incumbent upon me to give you my utmost attention to the consideration of so important a subject and to lay before Your Majesty the result of my reflections.

I have at the same time to report to Your Majesty that I have received the official account from Barbadoes of the death of Sir

With regard to the E. West India Regiment I beg leave humbly to mention to your Majesty, the name of Lord Cochrane who is the son of a General who served in Egypt, was left in a very trickling manner at the command of the Prisons there, without any instructions, and conducted himself fully to the satisfaction of your Majesty's Government, but some success very much of your Majesty's favor.

It is also to be mentioned to your Majesty, that I this morning had a conference with Lord Cochrane when he determined to propose to your ^{Majesty} in consequence of the very satisfactory account which General Fox gave of the health of the Governor, and of the little appearance

Duke of York of any intention on the Enemy's part to attempt upon the Siege of Gibraltar, to order them upon the Arrival of the 4th and 2^d Battalions of the 7th Regiment to send back the Garrison of Gibraltar will still gain an augmentation of more than four thousand Men, which in the Course of this Winter he may be enabled to recruit and send out for home two of out all the three Regiments to which I am bound, which proposal I trust will meet with Your Majesty's approbation.

I shall set out in the Course of this night for
