Lucien Houde May 10th 1791.

My Dear Augustus, The having the Cold you caught by the sudden change of weather has subsided without any visible detriment to your health is the more satisfactory as it gives the best ground for hopes that the excellence of the Climate of Hieres is restoring your lungs to their state, and that another Winter in that beautiful Island will perfect the cure. I lost no time in authorizing Baron Alvensleben to acquaint Captain Hanstein that I approved of Devay as your Summer residence agreeable to your wish and the opinion of Doctor Zimmermann, and consequently expect this will reach you there. I am certain you will be cautious during the Summer of not overheating yourself and that you will not take more Exercise than may be conducive to enable you to return to Hieres in perfect health, whatever can give rise or avoid fatigue seems to be the mode that should be adopted. Believe me ever

My Dear Augustus
Your most affectionate Father
George R.
