

Opinion
of the Five Physicians
May 31st. 1804

31 May 1804

We continue to be of opinion that His Majesty is sufficiently recovered to be capable of exercising his high functions. But there are still certain symptoms remaining, which make us apprehensive of a relapse, unless His Majesty will strictly and uniformly exert himself to correct those ideas which occasionally show themselves in his less guarded moments. Nor we cannot conscientiously pronounce His Majesty to be out of danger of a relapse, till those symptoms no longer exist. We therefore think it our duty to express our opinion of the absolute necessity of His Majesty's still conforming to medical guidance, till we can have the satisfaction of declaring that the recovery is perfect.
