My Dear Sir

The annexed letter and petition which I have the honor to send you have come into my hands under the following circumstances.

The writer Hitchen has since his commitment to Newgate by information which ^{he} afforded enabled me to apprehend some noted villains who had conspired to take me, and to recover the effects.

In this service I must suppose which has induced him to ^{send} me his Petition of the merits of which I am totally ignorant.
But which notwithstanding the very great reluctance I feel at any time or in any shape to trespass upon the time or patience of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, I could not possibly refuse to request of your kindness to submit Hutchins case to his Royal consideration, should it be found to deserve indulgence I feel but little doubt he will experience that mercy which I know to be amongst all those eminent Endowments which so conspicuous by adorn the character of his Royal Highness -

I remain the Honourable of your Sir with the highest Esteem your Faithful and Obedient Amble Servant
