

Gen. B. Bloomfield to Col. McKeehan

18771-2

Gen. Bloomfield

Ad. 25

My dear Friend

I will not make the attempt to express the extent of my thanks for your kind and pleasant epistles with its enclosures, which I herewith return, they are fully satisfactory as to the Point but little so as to the man, however as being that we know the inward feel I experience - I have however the greatest of consolation, & your valuable

Gen. B. Bloomfield to Col. McKahan

18772

Note is in proof that I have not conducted myself unworthily. but good friend where should I have been, were it not for your kindness. You know he I trust & know he capable of performing such an act of friendship. I shall therefore say no more.

I have been away since Saturday, as your letter should not have been unobserved so long. The Report of B's - ready, they go tomorrow. this does not affect as formerly, he looks he out today & I have seen him in higher spirits - he complains of his stomach but seems very well. He gives a farewell dinner to tomorrow today. The Duke of York staff dine & a few others - God bless us be well, & allow me to say that in gratitude & affection to none with yours

Yours attached friend

B. B.

L. G. was here today, very gloomy indeed, he expresses particular for you.

1871

Genl. Bloomfield
Oct. 25. 1811