Lord Wellesley

Intelligence from the North

18863

Aspley House 22<sup>d</sup> Nov
1811

Lord Wellesley has the honor to submit to Your Royal Highness's dispatches, received by Count Münster, & Mr Smith from Colonel Dornberg. It was intended that Mr Smith should have carried these papers to Your Royal Highness this morning; but as he was going to the office, he was overturned in his carriage, & so much hurt, that he cannot leave his room. There is no reason however to apprehend, that he will not be quite well in a day or two. There is no arrival from Russia; Your Royal

Royal Highness will no doubt have observed that the want of communication which Colonel Dornberg laments, has been equally regretted by Sir James Saumarez on the other side, for nearly a month past. As Sir James Saumarez & Colonel Dornberg were to meet, it may be hoped that this scene of confusion will at length be closed by some appearance of order & activity.
