

N. Coarut to Col. McCracken

Sunday N^o. 11 - 19002

[1811]

Mr. Fairman was from home when I went to appoint him to go with me to Mr. Adam this Evg - but in hope of getting the matter ended I ~~decided~~ went again to desire his Servant would carry my note to him - and I got at nine o'cl. this answer (inclosed). So I was forced to make a new appointment with him for 10 tomorrow morning at Mr. Adam's.

I judged it due to Gillett that at least he should run on all four with his author - & have been to night to his house, when also I have lost my labour for he always sleeps in the country on Sunday. However, he cannot now say I have neglected him in preference to the other. I inclose to you Fairman's last note to me, on account of the place he writes from; of which also I have informed Mr. A. but I think there is nothing in that, for the first day

Mr. Mahon

I saw him; on my asking him what was his original introduction to the D. of W. he said Mr Windham & that D. Northampton & Mr Whitton were also his friends. Tomorrow^{then} at half past 10 we shall be in Bloomsbury Sq. Perhaps afterwards at Gillett's - & then I will come here.
