Herford Street
April 18th

Sir

Without the least appearance that it would not be considered troublesome or encroaching I should not again have ventured upon writing but have left myself in those hands who saw me this morning to satisfy your Royal Highness that in one respect at least your kindness had not been thrown away upon an unworthy Person and it would perhaps have been better for me if I had for with every wish of expressing what I feel I can only say that I thank your Royal Highness from the bottom of my heart and that my fervent hope is that so great an act of good to me by which so many evils coming fast upon me have been worded off will have put your Royal Highness to as little serious inconvenience as such a gift must necessarily occasion though in the very highest situation.

I trust to your Royal Highness's forgiveness for this and with the most heartfelt gratitude remain your Royal Highness's most obedient Humble Servant

A. S. Hedges
