on Sunday Morning Colborne was released from prison very unexpectedly the Prisoner at whose suit he was arrested having dyed the very day before the arrest took place, you will easily conceive the feelings of his suffering family at his being restored to them, we sent him in immediately to Windsor Castle, but could have this unless until we have the means of discharging our bodyings & a few trifling bills, Every Shilling I could raise being sent to Chester to defray Colborne's unavoidable & enormous Expenses while there, the sum required for this is but small & if advanced would restore peace & comfort to a most persecuted family, whenever the Means are in my power how gladly how gratefully wd

I return it, Colonel McClellan writes I can almost certainly assist you, as my case is a hard one but I cannot intrude on his time until such time as propriety & feeling will allow me to apply to him. May I inquire on your dear Sir I request a favour from you to enable me to leave England as soon as I can remove my Dyette to Windsor,

I am Sir with the greatest Res^t
yours & c
