Mrs Maclaurin presents her Compliments to Col. McMahon - Mr. Greenwood did her the favor of a visit last Tuesday & informed her of the arrival of Lord Sidmouth, & Col. McMahon & recommended her to send a Note to a Mr. Becket to request the favor of him to let her know if Lord had lent her Memorial to The Prince Regent - This she has done, ~~but~~ she knows nothing respecting it since the period she lent it to Lord S. about two Months ago. when she understood his Lordship & Col. M. M. left town immediately after its delivery, but not before Col. M. M. lent her a very polite Note.
Saying that he wd attend to it when Lord S. lent it to The Prince, for which Mrs. M. begs he will accept of her grateful thanks. as this Lordship had not any previous notice of such being intended to be laid before him, & she a stranger, she is fearful he may have forgot, particularly as she is not acquainted with any of the Gent<sup>l</sup> in his Office - she has within these few days gone to town for the purpose as it will be more convenient - she cannot help being sanguine when The Prince is made acquainted with the Circumstances, as some of her friends assure her, & her old friend the Miss Hunkles, that he always attends to justice & particularly to the friends of his dear father - Mrs. M. Hayes Col. M<sup>e</sup> Mahan will pardon this intrusion
