William O'Brien presents his most humble respects to Col. McMahon and humbly hopes he will have the goodness to take his very unhappy situation, which he before stated, into his most humane consideration and recommend him to His Royal Highness the Commander in Chief for an Ensigny - O'Brien trusts the great regard Col. McMahon honours his late Grand father Gough with will both plead his excuse, and urge his goodness to recommend him - should he be honoured by an appointment in a Gazette or two, he could get to Portugal free of all expence.
