I send to you my Dear Friend, or rather leave with you in my way to the Pitt Rivers, the Fifty Suppers, retaining the Plate how many Treats you may want.

At any time however it will be sent to you, at a moment's notice You will not forget that

Sir T. Lawrence to Col. Kebleton

Learn for me His Royal Highness's Decision respecting the scabbard.
You forget indeed nothing that is of Interest to those whom you oblige.

Remember that if Mrs. Kebleton after being too liberal in the disposal of her share of the Surroundings should be in want of a particularly good one for some near Friend, I retain one for her, and will send it instantly on her wife's being known to me.

I am with the most faithful Esteem & Respect My Dear Friend
most truly yours
T. Lawrence
