

Translation
of preceding letter

22192

Translation

Thionville, Department of the Mosel
April 11th 1818.

Sir,

I hope you will not think me trespassing too far on your goodness, if I do myself the honour of calling to your recollection, that in the year 1814, when the foreign monarchs visited England, I had the happiness to be one of those, to whom you showed the most marked attention & kindness, as having the honour, along with three more aide-de-camps, of attending Prince Blücher von Wahlstadt to England.

From the Prussian Consul in London as well as from the newspapers I know that Baron Eben heretofore Colonel and aide-de-camp in the English service, was, by the signal generosity of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, rescued from certain death, to which he had been sentenced at Lisbon. Eben was the earliest friend of my youth, and, in the sequel, my brother-soldier; we ever lived on the most intimate footing, and so late as last year, I addressed many letters for him to Carltonhouse.

I am therefore very anxious to learn, whether he went from Portugal, where he may reside at this moment, and whether the letters which I addressed to Carltonhouse for him were duly forwarded. The latter regarded family-affairs and money concerns.

Not doubting but that you are informed where Monon von Eben & Brunnen now may sojourn, and in what circumstances he is, I most earnestly implore y^r goodness to communicate to me what you know about my friend, who, I am confident, must have left behind him in London a variety of affairs that required settling. Your compliance will claim my unbounded gratitude. With the greatest respect I have the honour to be

Sir,
your most humble servant
Von Wurck now Major and "Commandeur" in the 29th R^g of Infantry, of the Line.

To General
Sir Benjamin Bloomfield
Gd Gd Gd.

Translation of letter from Major von Wurck to Sir B. Bloomfield.

Thionville April 11. 1818

