

Chas. Feulensow

Mar. 6 1779

3271

I take the liberty of sending your Majesty a letter which I wrote to Lord North yesterday, & an answer which I have received from Mr Robinson on that subject. Part of Mr Robinson's letter would hardly be intelligible, if I did not send your Majesty another letter which I received from Mr Robinson yesterday, & with which I should not otherwise have presumed to trouble your Majesty; These letters will afford your Majesty some insight into the present state of things, & will prepare your Majesty for any thing that may be said to your Majesty tomorrow. I saw Lord Sandwich today who told me that his Carver went on with that Sr Lawrence Dundas & his faction would attend on every question in which he was personally concerned. That the Duke of Newcastle was zealous & would send all his Friends, - that the Grenvilles were subsided & would attend. - Lord North has also been very active, so has Lord An-hurst, & I must in justice to Mr Robinson say that he has laboured night & day.

Lord Sandwich said that Lord Lushington was very slack, & he imputed this to a want of heat in Lord Foxes, & he assigned his reasons, in which I do not wholly agree with him, but I will take the liberty of saying more to your Majesty on this subject tomorrow.

The Opposition are very active.
They flatter their Parliaments & keep up their spirits with hopes of success, in which I have not the least doubt they will be mistaken.
I hear however they have persuaded Admiral Keppel to vote here on Tuesday though he expressly told me that he would

Cha

go to

Mr

to go

Chas. Jenkinson

Mar. 6 1779

3271 (2)

go to Bath as today.

From Your Majesty's

March 6th 1779

to your Majesty's Dutiful Subject
C. Jenkinson

1 &
written
at Bath
I am in day.
was
Bath
to Bath
with writing
at Bath
I am
at Bath
I have his.
Admi:
morning
will go

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged paper]

6 Mar 1779