Lord North has the honour of sending to his Majesty a plan of arrangements, some to take place before the Provoostion, & others upon the resignation of L. George German, if the information we have received of his intentions proves true. But Lord North thinks it his duty as a faithful servant to his Majesty, & as a good citizen to add that no arrangement can be so effectual to the Public Service, as one that shall alter the person, ^{at} the head of the Treasury. Lord North felt his own faculties of mind ^{steadily} daily diminishing, & he is sorry to say, that he thinks the difficulties of this country increasing. He can help, therefore, repeating to his Majesty that a change in his department is necessary for his Majesty's service. Lord Gower, as first Lord of the Treasury, & Mr Lennox, as Chancellor of the Exchequer would make a strong Board, & these promotions would open the means of a very extensive & useful arrangement. Lord North begs have to add, that in that case His Majesty would have what he can hardly be said to have at present, a number of Members out of place who would be ready on every proper occasion to support the measures of Government to the utmost of his abilities.
