My dearest Son. I will begin My Letter with what the Heart dictates which is to return You thanks for all Y<sup>r</sup> Kindness & attention during Our Stay at Brighton.
& I shall be most happy to hear that You go on Improving in Y<sup>r</sup> Health which of Course will give Us the Pleasure of seeing You in London where at the Time of the Marriage approaches You will be much wanted.

The Moment I arrived at Windsor I sent off for Edward & had the Pleasure of seeing Him arrived at Eight this Morning. No Body can be more desirous of accomodating You in any way than He is, & I Enclose a Paper which States how <sup>He</sup> is Himself Settled about the Place in the Country. You will see by it, that whatever Y<sup>r</sup> Decision may prove to be, that You will have to do with People You Employ Yourself & may of Course all the Transactions more Easy. I am to have a Letter from Him to Tellam: which I may either send to Him or give according to Y<sup>r</sup> Directions to Mr Liverpool. He assured me upon His Honour that he could not remember what ~~the~~ Valuation the Creditors fixed at that Time, & He promises most Faithfully not to Name it to any Body. He sets off to Morrow Afternoon & any Letter will reach Him ~~write~~ still at Brussels wrote by Tuesdays Post which I have promised to send.

When we were a talking about the Ladies for Charlotte You thought their Salary should be £500. without wishing to take upon me, I would advise to give only £400 as the Queens Ladies have only Five & should she come to that Situation there now at £500. would then with reason claim an addition which even then might prove inconvenient to Her.

I also send a little Paper from My Friend Lord Bath, by which You will

The Marriage of H. H. The Prince Augustus, with the Duke of Brunswick was performed, in the Great Drawing Room at St James, & being a Private wedding H. H. was crowned in the usual Court Dress.

Note It is only on Public weddings that the Robe & Coronet are worn & that Brade Guards attend
