Sire

The Duke of Grafton whom I have just seen is sensible in the highest degree of your Majesty's goodness & consideration to him in permitting me to assure him that your Majesty had entertained no impression to his prejudice from his not attending the Council last night.

He afterwards asked me for the paper which I presented to put into your Majesty's hands saying it was not drawn with accuracy enough to be left there, & was only meant to satisfy me who am a very cautious Man.

If your Majesty has not heard it or thrown it away, I beg with that indulgence which Experience in every instance returns to me, without trouble to yourself, I shall esteem it a mark of goodness as it may enable me to satisfy his grace's tentatives.

But if there is the least impropriety in my proceeding to give your Majesty any further trouble upon the occasion, it will be a very sufficient reason for me to be satisfied without it.

I have the honor
