Sir.

I have just had the honor of receiving your Royal Highness's kind letter for which I beg you will accept my best thanks. I cannot say that I ever entertain'd the least doubt of your answer being favourable to the wish I express'd of continuing in the office I have the honor of holding in your family but I was happy in being assur'd that my feelings on that subject were not mistaken the chance of which on any occasion would distress me very much but particularly on the score of the sincere attachment I have so long borne to your Royal Highness. As you were

It is to consult the King on the subject of my letter I cannot resist expressing how much glattonid I am with his Majesty's concurrence with your opinion about it and at receiving this additional mark of his gracious conduct towards me which I should be grateful in not having frequently noticed with great satisfaction.

Accept My Dear Sir my most sincere and most hearty good wishes for the completion of every measure which can add to your happiness and to your fame and do me the justice as well as honor of ranking me among the most attached of your friends.

I have the honor to be Sir
