

R. B. Sheridan to H. R. H.

June 10 1796

Sir,

The Attachment I have uniformly proposed to your Royal Highness, the sincere and, allow me to say, disinterested concern I have taken, according to the best of my judgement, in whatever related to your Interests, and the unaffected Respect I have always felt for your Royal Highness's great and amiable Qualities - all suggest to me rather to risk incurring your Royal Highness's Displeasure by the appearance of intrusion than not to offer at this critical juncture in your Royal Highness's public situation the humble & sincere opinion of one who thinks he has the means of judging not inconsiderably, and who is sure that judgement is guided by the truest anxiety for your Royal Highness's real Honor and Happiness.

Passing almost by the Door of your Royal Highness in my way to Southampton, I have presumed to send this forward only to say that I am in readiness to obey any commands of your Royal Highness.

I have only to entreat your

R. B. Sheridan to H. R. H.

Royal Highness to forgive the freedom I have taken, and giving me credit for the motive, to believe me of all events - with every sentiment of Duty & attachment Your Royal Highness's very faithful servant
 R. B. Sheridan.
