Having waited, with the hope of being favoured with your promised communication of His Royal Highness's Command respecting my Expenditure on his Account until my necessities impel me again to trespass on you the Enquiry — Having I trust by my proposition to receive back every Article I purchased for His Royal Highness, not only winced the Justice of my Claim, but my readiness to receive its liquidation in any manner most convenient to His Royal Highness

Had my Prosperity continued, I should still awaited His Royal Highness's pleasure without hesitating any Request of his discharge

But Sir such is my Situation that in a few days I must transfer all Dues to me, to Solicitors, acting for my Auditor, when their duty will dictate applications to every one on whom I have any claim

 - For His Royal Highness's information I beg to mention to you that many of the Stems Spunkard were delivered at Mr Fitzherbert's House - and at Carlton House

Since I had the honor of interview with you I have seen Mr Heathcote who desired me to say he does not remember having made you any promise of the Clock Transfer

Yours most obedt Servt
