My dear Sir

An unexpected and unlooked for visit of Mr. Nugent to Peterborough on Friday last, rendered my doing so company with him unavoidable: The meeting however afforded me an opportunity of obtaining a copy of his intended Pamphlet against the Duke of York. & addressed to His Majesty. It contains 127 pages which I have very attentively read, & altho' he says he is to forward one to Cheltenham for your perusal, I should ill perform the duty you have assigned to me, if I did not communicate to you the earliest intelligence of any thing which even by possibility could affect the highly exalted Character whose illustrious patronage I have the honor to boast. It told me you had already applied to him about the book, & that he assured you nothing was to be introduced that could be supposed to apply to the P.^r; but in my humble opinion he has not adhered to his promise,

Yours

as some passages contain the most unqualified abuse of all the King's sons, few readers will suppose the writer intended to separate H. R. H. from his brothers, and I think I ought offer to me, to forego the publication if you should agree in that opinion, is a tolerable proof of his own conviction on the subject.
Beside, my dear Sir, the Pamphlet violently attacks the Dukes of Clarence, Kent, & York, slanders the memory of Mr. Fox, & ridicules the Duke of Norfolk, & consequently I should presume, must be highly disgusting to our illustrious Master, whose bounty Mr. H. has so very liberally experienced. I shall accordingly await your instructions on this point, & beg you will ever believe me with unalterable regard

Dear Sir, your faithfully devoted

J. G.

Care. Mr. Nathan
