Necker is again in power, but ^{it} is said, only for a short Duration. By dint of Money well-applied to three persons who are constantly about the King's person, he is again taken into Confidence: and it is certain, he hath actually issued a very, very considerable sum of money to be lent to certain persons in England upon no other Security than their own single Bonds.

A good Look-out must soon discover the Bondsmen. 500,000 Lounds are likewise issued for other purposes of Intrigue, the special Heads of which will be transmitted either this Day, or by the next Post-Mail to Aristarchus.
