I am glad to hear from your Majesty that your cold is better. Your Majesty acts with great prudence in not having a Low Room: now, & I hope your Cold will not be increased by your Abundance at the Drawing Room.

I trouble your Majesty with a Warrant for holding Courts Martial at Gore, to which your Royal Signature is wanted. There is inserted in it another to be cancelled, which upon consideration is thought to contain greater power than it is safe to entrust to a Commandant at Gore.

I saw Lord North about a week ago at his Office, when he held a long discourse with me, by which I clearly saw that he had not come to any Resolution; I observed that he was strongly impressed with a Fear of displeasing Lord Advocate, & I think he means to wait till the other comes to Town; I suspect also that Lord Hillsborough does hurt by communicating too much of what is said in the Closet. From that time I have not seen either Lord North or Mr Robinson or heard any thing from them; but I saw this morning Mr Grey Cooper; & I learnt from him as well as Mr Ches. Bourns: that Lord North still remain'd in the same uncertain state of Mind, & wanted Lord Advocate in Town; & I hear that Lord George Germaine has expressed his displeasure for being left by Lord North in the situation he is.

If I had paid my Duty to your Majesty I intended to have communicated this to you; & I thought I might presume to send it to your Majesty for your Information; though I am cautious of what I say & do in a Business, in which my Name has had some share.

The Duke of Gloucester sent Col. Hyde to me this morning to apprise me that Col. Forsey had proposed, to Capt Glynn at considerably more than the regulated Price, that he hoped Glynn would not be set aside, as he was the eldest Lieutenant & the eldest Adjutant of the Regiment
Col. Forsey did not purchase his Company nor any other Commission, except paying the Difference between a Lieutenantcy & Troop of Dragoons.

I add two other Warrants for your Majesty's signature, which are just sent me from the Office.
