Cher General,

Il n'y a pas d'ami plus excellent et plus utile que vous cher General et je ne doive pas même me reprocher de vous devenir sans votre assistance. Je suis véritablement étonné que le Duc ne soit pas la cause de cette aventure. Je l'aime trop pour pouvoir imaginer qu'il me fasse du mal. Il se peut aussi que d'il m' ait dit qu'il en avait perdu la lettre j'aurais pris la clef des moines, je suis ne cause de la facture ni prison que je cause, je suis sûr de ne pas les avoir mérités. Je ne puis dire aujourd'hui tout ce que j'ai à dire. Mais ce que vous m'avez permis de dire. D'être accusé au Duc, il se détachera qui il vous enverra ma lettre, tant que j'apparais ce que je lui envoie par le Duc. Ici que cela concernait un projet de France. Le Duc j'ai détaché ce que vous avez écrit par le Duc et je me flatte que cela plaira à votre Excellence que malgré cela un déplacement eût été pour moi le plus convenable mais qu'en cas que vous deviez les faire voir je la supplie de faire quelques conditions que je propose relativement aux lettres. D'après que le Duc ne prendra pas mal cette liberté, car qui peut même juger que vous deviez en être jaloux, et il ne faut pas oublier que de son côté, ce n'est pas sans raison que vous avez de leur en leur a produire des choses louables. Je suis sûr qu'il me pardonnera que vous allez continuer à faire, car il y a de l'explication par tout, quoique dans toute la Suisse l'on ne soit dans aucun de l'endroit le plus convenable et il y a une 30^e d'explication qui chevauvent, l'un sur des places de cho. et vous allez jusqu'à ce tout humillement en la bible qui n'a l'air de douage même.

Le projet ^{indigne} parait au debut plus ridicule que il ne l'est, si vous prie de le bien considérer.
Si le Duc recourt à l'avis, car me en vous en flate, il sera géré par le Dr. et le Prince reprendra par lui-même des excellentes habitudes. Un grand point pour rendre la chose noble et honorable, doit que cela se fait précisément à la Majorité, on en peut dire, tout le passé " n'a été qu'un accident ".

Par ce qui en est de la plantation de mes choies, soyez bon cher ami, que je ne l'entreprendrai pas sans votre enseignement. Je ne précipite rien dans ces sortes de choses, mais je ne conçois rien de plus affecté que d'être esclaves d'un genre de d'indistinctement opposé à mes humeurs, et de ne pas même entrevoir une ombre de contentement.

Je ne manquerais pas de suivre les avis de notre Ami Bardi qui partait de la tête d'un conscience en petites matières, mais quoique les autres d'après, vous cherchent à se faire le point d'appui de mes expériences, et il me semble que vous l'entreprenez comme

Cher General,

la réponse enjointe vous prouvera cher General, que ^{ceste} l'herosme de la justice est herosisme d'usage. Je vous rends mille graces de m'avoir avoué que mon rapport de de lano. n'est restonné, puis que je n'aurois pas aimé que S. M. eut une fautive idée de mon exactitude.

S. M. m'a lu ce qui elle vous écrit. Le logon de Venise elle auroit lieu de s'en plaindre, et j'en resto toujours a mon Systeme que c'est la meilleure Vite de tache la Suisse pour elle mais il n'en est pas moins vrai qu'un déplacement continuel occasionneroit encore d'inconvénient.
 Cela va, relativement au lens jadis, très bien, mais plus on s'ancre quelques ports plus on prend des fantaisies et taches a faire aller les gens a la guise, et ils s'en trouvent toujours qui dorment dans le panneau. Avec cela on fait correspondance avec les Vénitiens, on reçoit delicieux des les Chevaux et Voitures etc. etc. etc. Tout ceci est écrit par les charges de de depuis. Si un resto nous devons voyager par la Suisse et j'employé tout 4 mois cela sera difficile, car si nous ne pouvons pas jurer en Italie, nous n'avons que les petits cantons, a part tout le reste. Enfin j'attends les ordres, et on s'achève on et tel qui ils nous diront

Le que vous avez mentionné de deux Chevaux de selle a inhoinement plus, mais on veut pourtant attendre les Ordres du Roi. Le prix est, qu'il faudroit payer ces Chevaux inhoinement cher, que de la s'en suivra un Paletot, Parice, Lionce etc. etc., et qui il faudra necessairement encore du travail pour vous.

A l'égard du Valet de chambre j'appréhends bien qu'il en a déjà un ou deux d'ordinaire qui. C'est un hazard, qui n'est advenu que chez une M^{lle} Lynton marquée à un M^{rs}. Salladin, au près duquel il est appelé Coche. Vous voyez que ce double travail est le même que celui qui est toujours le même. Si par aventure il venoit à se quer de quitter, mais comme c'est effectivement un bon homme je doute 1 que ce ne soit pas à son avantage

2 Sur toute chose qui m'est envenimée, je ne dois pas faire à propos, et qu'on se il en arrive, je dois dire que si j'ai un homme comme il faut ou respectueux et qui ne quitte, et cela de son bon, pour nous accompagner il est plus précieux que tous nos plans.

Je ne me souviens pas de s'il est possible de faire du le 2 de 10. ce n'est pas en lui assignant ce qui il doit avoir, cela de voir le moyen par lequel je m'introduis par un tel après cette époque je ne dois pas me faire en de le croire alors libre, et que par tout

Geneva, June 8th 1708:

My dearest General,

Your most kind, and obliging Letter of the 22^d of May, arrived here on the 2th of June: I am exceedingly happy that you still think, it is His Majesty's Wish, for me to remain here till the end of next winter, for I am really quite enraptured with Geneva: surely there never was a spot more favoured by Providence in every possible manner than this. In regard to what few excursions the King may think it proper for me to make in the course of the summer, I should imagine they will be but trifling, if Geneva is to remain our Head Quarters: for I believe, that France, and Italy will always be forbidden Fruit, and, as we have seen almost every Swiss Canton, except we vally again into the German Empire, which, at present, seems not very likely, I should conceive, that a course to the Glaciers, and perhaps the small Swiss cantons, will be the utmost extent of our peregrination: however patience, which, God knows, experience has taught us to learn a good share of, will in the end clear up our suppositions, when the long wished for, Royal orders once arrive. Concerning my keeping saddle horses, if the King would grant me the permission to do so, I should certainly most exactly conform to the order of never exceeding two, if that was his pleasure: but I have so veldom found a gracious answer to any of the little trifling requests that I have made him, that, I am now very shy of asking, without being very certain of Success: at the same time, I am in great hopes of obtaining his Leave without it being necessary for me to ask; as Wanghenhym assures me, he had reported to the King, my exact conformance, in having never yet, either rode or drove out, and also requested from Him, not to withhold from me any longer, so innocent, and so natu-ral an amusement, also begging him, if he would allow it, to state the number He would approve of: so that I propose waiting in peace for the King's answer upon this Subject, before I take any further Steps to secure the success of my wishes.

59

I will not take up any of your time, to explain to you the unjustifi-able, and impudent behaviour of my Valet de Chambre Rymon, I hope Lieut. Provost will put you quite aspart of that. I only trust to your goodness, and to your friendship, to do your utmost without ruining the man for Life, to effect his immediate dis-
 -mission from me, as it is now considerably above three months that he has not done the most trifling part of his Duty: as to filling up his place again, I shall obey with due submission His Majesty's Commands, whether he will send me another servant over, or allow me, with the advice of Wanghenhyme, to chuse one here. — So much for myself, were you not so much my friend, I should apologise for the dryness of my Letters. — Our newsmongers from Hannover write word that the King had bought Frederic house at Hannover, if that is true or not, you must know better than me; however be it as it may, people pretend, if I ever return to live there again, that it will fall to my share: The Low-ick Peacock, I hear, lowers its pride, since the last shock it received by Major Spoken being named to the Post of Plügel-Adjutant, which the other endeavoured to make much interest about. Since my last, the old Colonel Dellar of the regiment now called Mutier's at Stade, and Lieut. Colonel Harling, of the Leib Regiment have quitted the Service: now, that is all the news I have to tell you, therefore, I will here conclude my Letter, with subscribing myself, my dear General,

Your most truly affectionate and Devoted friend.

Je dis que votre Prince n'est pas devenu galant, mais libere et sage, que toute la Ville le

My Dear General

The winds have proved so favourable as to land us here on Tuesday, the ninth day from Plymouth —

I found the Prince well, tho not too well pleased, with his situation here, or with my arrival. I find therefore many Prejudice, which I had foreseen, and I staid, strongly confirmed, and likely much to operate, against the purpose of my being sent here —

The experiment remains to be tryed; what time, patience, and assiduity, can effect, to remove this unfavourable impression, which was but too certain to arise, shall not on my part be wanting — and shall be happy to inform you, should the result coincide more with our Prevention, has done a great deal. in this time, and, if any could have rendered much essential Service - he proposes to leave this in ten or twelve Days; Lisbon probably must be his Centre, as our expected Neutrality with Spain, will hardly permit, any Vessel being detached from this small Squadron -

Crauford has acquainted you with the amount of the Bills drawn on Court - of which you will have seen the necessity to accept - and as the Prince has desired, the Amount - might be deducted from his Allowance, when fixed - the inconvenience will not be great, in paying them out of the Great Ho. - Anticipation I wish to avoid and shall endeavour, as much as possible to assist

Captain Crauford is dispatched from hence so suddenly, as to prevent me from treating in Detail, the Subjects on which, we have conversed relating to the Prince and the State of his Affairs, - at present however, the less necessary to discuss, as you have already received the fullest accounts from Crauford, which he will shortly, have further opportunity to explain to you in Person -

I am indebted to him, for the fullest communication, on every Point, which could contribute to put me in possession of, what has passed since he left England, - and what is now likely to occur, the Painshie has taken, have been in France, and attended with as much Success, as under such Circumstances, could possibly have been expected, and much more, than could have been effected, without a degree of zeal, and a pious attention directed by a very sound

Judgment, which has enabled him to render, to the Prince the most essential Services, of which His Royal Highness seems most highly sensible, and Sincerely hope, that the King will be equally so.

In the Expense, which the Prince has incurred here, too much Money, has no Doubt been spent, but less thrown away, than I had imagined. To look for a well regulated, and judicious economy from one of this Age, and disposition, would be vain - it is there for only to be wished for, but not ^{yet} to be expected.

In furnishing a house here, you know from experience, the enormity of the expense - and the manner, in which I suppose all sorts, have plundered him - can only be conceived, by those, who have local knowledge of the Place; - of Superfluities, there are some; but of this, I can assure you, that the house, was better furnished, when I remember it is habited, by Sir Robert Boyd.

The Prince writes to his Stating his Situation, Requesting to be enabled, to discharge the Debt now incurred, and hoping that the King will continue to him here, the same Allowance he had at Geneva —

I am exactly of opinion, that it will be equally wise, and liberal, to grant this Request — as it is accompanied with a promise, made before Congress, and now confirmed with his own hand, to the King — that if his Majesty will set him free, from the Embarrassment of his present Situation — he will feel obliged, and grateful for such Proof of his Majesty's paternal Regard, in consulting his present Comfort, and future Happiness — and binds himself solemnly, to avoid Contracting Debts, or giving the King, on that head, any future Cause of Displeasure — His general Conduct, in every other Respect, has been perfectly to the Satisfaction of Genl. Mordaunt — and the Approbation of the whole Garrison — Thus far, this is brought, to a point of Decision —

must rest on your Determination - but since I think it a point of so much consequence, that no means should be left untried, in order to Effect it - in this

My Dear General

I have not written to you for some time, from the uncertainty, we have apprehended, in the Conjunction thro Spain, and until now, I had only to repeat, what you will have learn'd from some more fully and minutely, than Volumes could convey.

He has inform'd you, of the Embassy from Geneva to Switzerland, and the instructions, which M^r. the Prince de Paleis, was charg'd to execute - by the Success of this Mission, he seems to understand his Employment, and is return'd here this morning, with Mad^m.
Dubuis, Sister to a young woman, who lived with the Prince at Geneva, and by whom he had a daughter - The ostensible Cause of this Journey, was to convey the Child to its Father - the real one, to procure a Mistress, in the event, to whose care on the death of the Mother, the Child was left at Geneva, but had died, on the Voyage, from Marseilles hither - I hear this lady perfect

119

perfect

some Talents for Musick, to which her Sister was bound, and by which, she supported the family — A musical Intercourse produced the former intimacy, and has occasioned the Prince, to wish, that she might replace her Sister — M^{rs}. the Valet, who is his Masters confidential Agent in this Business, gives the Prince to understand, that Mademoiselle Dubois, means to play the Lucretia in this Piece, and return to Paris, to engage in Musick as a Profession, and that her inducement, for undertaking, so long a Journey, and Voyage, was purely from Motives of Affection, to her Prince, and to mark her Respect for the Father, which she could not have carried into execution, had not her own Father attended as her Protector.

This History you will conclude, as I do, calculated to enhance in the Eyes of the Prince, the merit of her coming, and the Sacrifice she makes, in leaving his Masters, when her Talents enable her to live in Independance, and with Reputation.
This Visit you perceive will occasion a change in the Princes Situation, and an Addition to his Expence, of which we were ignorant, when I left England; It is an Evil now of us could prevent, and all that can be done, is to guard, as much as possible, the Princes

Parkell already drained, from being wholly exhausted. —

In other respects, the introduction of this female, may present greater Ills, it is not to be expected, that a young Man of this Age, will had a life of Liberty, and we have our Ladies here, as well as with you, equally ready to sacrifice their Reputation, and the peace of their families, to the vanity of such a conquest. Crawford can instruct you, how strongly the Prince's smiles have been concerted, by our rival Duress. His attentions at that time, gave rise to Scandal, which has since increased to a Degree, as to induce me, very sincerely to wish, for the arrival of this female — as the only means by which he might be diverted from Pursuits, the consequences of which, must have involved him in Difficulties without End, and proved dangerous, as well as Disgraceful —

In a choice of Difficulties, we are happy to have recourse to the least — in my own opinion, the Prince is likely to suffer less, in every point of View, at present, than before, and more so, as I hear the newly arrived, is not endowed, with such attractions, as are likely to make a very strong impression —

In the Prince's general conduct, he continues, to give much Satisfaction, and the General is much pleased, with his Zeal and Attention to his duty - His Mode of living is simple, and for one of his Age, abstemious - The Heat, occasions frequent Returns of a Bilious Complaint - which is sometimes violent, and only kept under, by Emetics, and Sea bathing - The former, I fear he makes too frequent use of - You have heard of your Names, on the Annual ground, which are frequent, and rapid, Strokes, Shakes and spas, not uncommonly starting together - The Prince is generally there but merely as a Spectator - having never engaged in it farther, or made a single Bet on the Event - No one in this respect, can possibly know more.

On the Subject of general Expence, he has much to regulate - with less knowledge how to Effect it, than I supposed possible - The Difficulties, which have occurred, in stating to him, the necessity of retrenching, a Variety of Expences were unavoidably increased, from the Salaries, with which he saw, and deemed every Suggestion, which came from one - I have therefore cautiously avoided, remarking trivial expences - of which there are but too many - in hopes of gaining ground.

matter of some importance; nor have my endeavours been wholly unsuccessful. A Diminution of Taxes has taken place - the Prince consents to keep former Houses, and defer the Repairs, and Alterations at General's Quarters. As we become more known to each other distrust lessens, and confidence; I hope will follow - by every possible means, I endeavour to remove the prejudices, under which I arrived, and have constantly had recourse to combat - nor am I without the hopes of succeeding -

I expect soon to hear from you - in consequence of Bradford's Return and Representation; of the State of Affairs here - Time more strongly confirms me, in the Opinion I then gave - as to the good Policy, of setting the Prince here, on a respectable footing, and that the Expence incurred in doing so, will be well laid out. To suppose, that the Money expended here, was judiciously laid out - would be more absurd, than the Application of part of it, may have been - but can it be expected, that a Propensity to expence like his, is at once to be corrected; we may safely say, it never was, or can, unless Miracles are again to operate - I with 123 much

pains, and unremitting attention, so good a purpose, can by degrees be effected. it is all we can hope for. or have a right to expect.

I have already stated the ill consequences, which must ensue, by having the Prince here in Debt. The Degra-dation of Character, and the conscious pride resulting from it - are well worth attaining, and it is to be hoped, will be the consequence of his coming here - but they must fall to the ground, and all respect, for his Rank, and Station, be lost - if every Member here Southern be has in their hands, been in Debt. I feel authorized to speak of his Royal Highness with disrespect -

In the Prince's letter to the King, he has completely furnished arms, against himself - and will stand self convicted for his non performance, of a solemn, and Voluntary Promise - should he not strictly adhere, to his own Proposals - which the King by complying with, will have a just Claim on the Prince to perform his Part -

An Object which I have in view, and consider of the utmost importance - is to make the Prince sensible of the necessity, of not only discharging the most importunate Claimants, who are on the Spot - but of appropriating, a part of the Lord, which he hopes the King will allow him - to discharge some of his Debts in England; and to arrange his Income in such a manner, as to allot a part of it, to be apply'd for the same purpose I think it will strike you, as forcibly as it does me, that the most likely means, to prevent the Prince, from futerely involving himself as he has hitherto done - will be - to make him pay his own Debts or at least a part of them - and to remove every Idea of their being paid by the King - which I am convinced, has hitherto provingally conduc'd to their increase - but in order to Effect this purpose he must be plac'd for the want of Debt and supplied with the means to prevent his being so in future - if he misapplies them he then can have no cause - on this ground, I have, and do support the expediency of increasing his M. Highness's allowance, on the Lord he has propos'd - it can only be, from the practical knowledge, of paying his old Debts, and the restriction of his our Engagement not to contract new, that he can ever be taught - the necessity, of bringing his expence within his Income -

127

Arrangements of this kind should be liberal

125

I have never known success attend any, that arose from wisdom and as we must ultimately rely on the Prince our Conscience - of the imprudence of his past conduct - to convert him, in the wisdom of changing it - and thereby giving the King, every latent factor in his power - I conceive that a sense of the affection Beyard, shown by his Majesty, in relieving his present Distresses and placing that Confidence, in his Royal Highness's future good Conduct - are the only probable means to make that impression on the mind of the Prince, so as to produce the good Effects, we all so anxiously wish to promote -

It has been unfortunate, that when his Majesty determined, to send the Prince to this Place, the success seem to be assured him - had not been at the same time fixed - the want of which, gave a latitude, to the Prince to indulge his Propensity to expence - which Crawford would have been better able to combat - could he have stated the necessity of more attention to Economy, than at that time was in his power - as the Prince insisted, that his allowance, would not be less than at former - flattering him self, that what he so much wished

12 110 45416-7

As a certainty to take place. This Delusion we are all too apt to fall into - nor can we expect, that one of his Age, or Character, should be exempted from it - But to me it is clear - that unless my hands were strengthened, I can neither give satisfaction to the King or serve the Prince - and thus situated my being sent - or continued here - can be of no use at all - nor can I supply the Princes current expenses, unless the Money drawn by him, before my arrival, is allowed.

The Reduction of Expenses, which I have presented to the Prince to agree to - has, and will prevent his Debt from increasing but cannot answer the purpose of diminishing those, in which I found him involved, and under the pressure of which we at present labor -

In conversing with the Prince lately on the subject of his Expenses - I mentioned the necessity there must be, of a total change, and Reduction of expenses, should his Majesty, not comply with the Request, made by his W. Highness - who answered me, with much heat, that if he was to remain here - such Reduction was impossible, but if it came to that extremity

He

would sell off every thing he had, to pay his Debts, and quit the Place. I found it was not the time to combat so extravagant an Idea, or point out the ruinous consequences that must attend it. which I shall take the first occasion to state in the strong point of Reason, it requires - but it is in vain to suppose that should be our Dilemma or so violent a Step - that were here, it can be prevented, except by Persuasion - I have carefully avoided, what ever may disgust or irritate, by getting and good humour - must may be effected, and hardly any thing without it - feel to have very clearly, and judiciously, seen this - from the beginning - and it is the Rule we both invariably pursue,

Of my own Liberation, I shall only say - that it is the most arduous, and to some I was plac'd in I feel under the pressure of another Anxiety, from the desire I have, to act in conformity to the Kings Service, and that without I have had it so little in my power to do so - should ever take Place, which on part of the Prince, would be a most fortunate Event - it is to be hoped that the Report of Dr.
Meathfields coming here - has no foundation - it would surely be unwise, to entrust the Defence of this Place, to one, whose Age and Infirmitie, must render him unfit for so arduous and Laborious -

in Stalen - how unfair to require from a veteran, to risk in his Dotage - the well earned laurels of his more vigorous time of life;
 The Example of poor old Blakeney at Ansona, or his later years in point of age, and infirmity, the Dutch Governor of Bergenop Zoom, should teach us that Places are comparatively strong, or weak, according to the exertions of those who defend them.

If fortunately, the Spaniards should again attack themselves to the purpose of gaining this Place - its Defense happily, can not be placed in better hands, than those of your friend & slave, his Activity of Mind, and Body, cannot be exceeded, and he fortunately possesses, in an eminent Degree, the Talent so desirable, and yet so rare, of conciliating the Minds of those under his Commands - and thereby, rendering the very same Duty, here unavoidable - pleasant, to the feelings of the Officer, and Soldier - who quickly see the Difference between useless precautions, and wise Circumspection - They feel that no unnecessary Duty, is here, exacted, and cheerfully perform, what is required, from the fullest Conviction, that it is the Wish of their Commander, to promote the Comfort of every Individual, when it is compatible, with the publick Service

13

Nov 28 1770

I have seldom, been less inclined to write, than at the commencement of our correspondence from hence; convinced, that my letters must have been, unsatisfactory, where, I wished to convey more pleasing intelligence than a recapitulation of Distresses, Complaints, and mortifications.

Having persecuted you, with a Relation of them, for the Summer Months, I resolved, that unless some unforeseen Court - Required Communication, to leave your Autumn unmolested, and Reserve, for your Return to town, at the time you have announced; a farther Account of the manner, in which, you have passed the same. Prised here.

I have now very sincere pleasure, in being able, to trace, a Picture much altered, for the better.

better.

In August, the State of the Princess's Finances, were such, that by deducting the £1000 drawn for, and expended; before my arrival here, I saw little probability, of my being able to provide, for the ordinary demands of his subsistence, until another payment of his Allowance, became due. In this dilemma, I intreated you, to inform General Atholam, of my Situation, and to Request, that I might have a Credit with Dr. Drummond, for £1000 Extra, to answer a pressing, or unavoidable exigency, for the Application of which, I made myself personally answerable. General Atholam in his letter to me, in consequence of your Communication, seems to apprehend, that I had not endeavored to guard Prince Edward; Against the Effects of Anticipation; and supposing, him acquainted with the Requisition I had made, that he would look upon such Credit, as a Fund; for the Continuation, or Increase of his Expences, instead of feeling the Necessity, there was, of a large, & speedy diminution, of them.

On this head, I probably have not been sufficiently explicit, but the contrary was exactly the case - the Prince neither was, or is instructed, in the Requisition I then made, and the application of that Sum, or any part of it, I only proposed to use, on occasions of the most pressing Emergency, where promptitude of Payment, was indispensable, to prevent the Prince from appearing in a Situation, disgraceful to all, but most so - where Rank so elevated, renders all Parts of his Conduct, narrowly observed, and severely criticised. - The distress I then had, so much reason to apprehend, has fortunately and I confess unexpectedly been averted, by a Change which shortly followed, and saved me, from the necessity of troubling General Atholm again, on that Subject. From the Opposition I was obliged to make, to many things, to which the Prince was strongly attached, I had every reason to apprehend, that a rupture must be the consequence. - If that took Place, my continuing

here, could be of no Use — and you know, and approved, in that case, the Resolution I had taken, and communicated, to his Majesty, of demanding his permission to return —

I very soon saw, that the only means, by which, I should save the Prince, was by endeavoring to remove the Prejudices, which in his Mind, so strongly operated against me, and for a time, indeed all I could do unavailing —

I was therefore, under the necessity, of being as guarded as possible, in the Representations, I have been obliged to make, towards effecting a Change of the Mode, and Quantum of the Expences, in which the Prince had unfortunately engaged, and persuaded himself, were indispensably necessary — to convince him, you may imagine, has not been easily effected, and to prevail upon him, to Alter, lessen, and suppress arrangements, which he had formed, on the Idea of a larger

113 45420-1

145 5

allowance, and which would have exceeded, the Income he expected, and desired, has proved, by far the most arduous task, I have ever been engaged in.

To gain any Point, it was necessary to proceed, with the greatest Circumspection, and remove all appearance of restraint - of which, he is so extremely jealous that the Idea of an attempt to control, only confirms him more strongly in any habit, about which, he had ever become indifferent - in some instances, it has occasioned, his continuing longer in, or even returning to a practice, where too much pains have been taken, to induce him to lay it down.

Fortunately, by not attempting too much at a time - or pressing too strongly, the Changes he seemed most averse to make - the Prince has been prevailed upon, to adopt such Regulations, for his present, and I hope, for his future Expenses, as will, if he prosecutes, prevent the Disorders, in which, he has been hitherto constantly involved.

And keep his expediture here, within the limits of his present Income.

It has ever been as clear to me, as it is to you, that his M^{ty} Highness, has no Occasion, to extend his Expences beyond that Sum, but to convince him of such a Truth, is not so easily effected.

The Principles, and Practice, of just Economy, you will know my good friend, are only to be acquired, in the School of the World, with which Princes, and men of high Rank - are not always sufficiently acquainted, to derive the advantages of which they often stand in need, in the management of their Affairs - and you are well aware of the difficulty, there ever must be, to effect a change of Ideas, or substitute a practice, which imposes Restraint and Requires self-denial, where we have been for any time, in habits, of a contrary tendency - in circumstances like these, Allowances must necessarily be made, or we shall ever be subject to Disappointment, from expecting more than can be Effected.

His Servants, tho' still more numerous, than he has occasion for, have been considerably reduced. His horses have not increased, since I have been here; and six, purchased for him in England, he has been prevailed upon to dispose of three - a temporary Addition to his Stud, has been occasioned by a present from the Emperor of Morocco - of a horse, who at the same time sent another, to General B. Stara. Both will be sent to England; by the first opportunity, as the Prince intends them, for his Brother, the Prince of Wales - La Musich, his Expence is become more moderate, the greater part of the Musicians he imported, have been fortunately got rid of - and I flatter myself, that ere long, more will follow -

The death, which occurred, at General Greene, has been amongst the most difficult, to combat - his Passion for Building, & Hunting, &c. has led him into an Expence more to be regretted, from its being unnecessary - and without completing, what he proposed, it has at - length

been given up - having been longer pursued, than would otherwise have been the case, from a want of Employment the Officers of this Regt. have profited, by their Colonel, having repaired a house, which his name is habited, but gave it to them, on the arrival of the Regt. - as it was impossible, to find Quarters, for the Troops sent to increase the Garrison, and the Officers, who on the appearance of war, came out to join their Corps - The Prince sees, and at present seems sensible, how inadequate his Income, our must be, to similar undertakings - subject, as they always will, to the impositions, of undertakers, and workmen - he declares, that on his return to England, he will neither build, or alter, but hire the house, he may have occasion for - I have endeavored, by every Means I can devise, or practice to reduce his Expences here, so as to pay off part of the Debt, contracted before my arrival, which has in no instance, increased; but the Diminution has been also trivial.

14

113 45422-3

149 9

nor should I be able, to accomplish it, in less than two years and a half, from the end of this; were his Expenses, to remain as they have been, these last two Months—

In his Mode of living, when alone, nothing can be more plain, or simple, when he entertains either the Garrison, or Strangers, he will be magnificent— This year, our Visitors, have been more than commonly numerous, besides a large Squadron of Portuguese, which has been here, through the summer, and is expected to remain, also for the winter— the increase of Troops, and the number of Officers, who from the Appearance of war, have joined this Regt^t necessarily, have added to the Expense of his Table— But this has not been—without its use—

His manours, which were constrained, by mixing in Company, have acquired a degree of ease— and the attention necessary to pay to his Guests, which at first

147 was in hand

from want of practice, has by frequently occurring becomes habitual; and from attempting ^{it} at first, with Reluctance, he now executes it with pleasure, from being able to effect it, with ease, to himself, and much to the satisfaction of all who approach him -

You know already, in what manner, and for what purpose, the Debt for which, the Prince is here answerable, was contracted.
His coming out, was at too short Notice, to make the necessary Provision - or from a just Arrangement, how he was to live - he landed therefore, wholly unprovided, with any furniture to enable him, to occupy the Quarters, assigned him - and had to search for the implements, necessary to prepare a Dinner for himself - or to offer, as his Rank, and Situation required, a seat at his Table, - to those, with whom, it might be either proper, or pleasant, ^{for him} to associate - Ignorant of the expense, and conceiving that all we had seen, in other Houses, were necessary in his own - he bought many things, for which, there certainly were no occasions -

and of others, a much larger quantity, than necessary - Crawford certainly tried, by every means in his power - to lessen this Expense, as much as possible - but at that time, it was impossible, to keep it, within the bounds of strict Economy.

His Creditors here, however prone to imposition, are certainly more entitled to compassion, than the Tradesmen in England - the Shopkeepers, and Mechanicks here, accustomed to credit the Officers of the Garrison, to a Degree, which often proves ruinous, to both - had never seen a person here of the Prince's Rank, or entertained an Idea, that his Income, was not equal to any Expense he might incur - This delusion, has destroyed, if not ruined several, and those unfortunately the most deserving - I have you may imagine, suffered persecution from all who are concerned - without any Power - or as yet, any prospect of Relief -

The Reasons I formerly gave, why I thought it good Policy to accede to the Request made by the Prince, for an Addition to his Income, and to be assisted in paying his Debts here - have not changed - on the contrary, time has more strongly confirmed me in thinking, that I was not mistaken.

To remove the Prince from Society, highly disadvantageous and to effect a Change in Habits, equally injurious, he was sent here - I therefore consider his landing, to have been the Period, at which, he may be justly said, to have made his Entrance, into the world, to have clasped with, or been introduced, into the Society of Men - until then he certainly had never thought, or for a moment, entertained any other Idea, than those of a Boy, just escaped, from College - and released, in the first Moments of Liberty, to be repaid, for the Restraints of Masters, and the Confinement, exacted by his former Situation - What follies do we not see, every day, committed, by Youth, under similar Circumstances, and for which allowances must be made - but where there is no dishonorable Action, no Dereliction of Principles - in time and by correction, tempered with encouragement; and when reunited, with Rewards, all will come right again - and produce more Effect, on a generous Mind, than by any other Mode, can be expected -

The care of his Regt. and Duties of his Profession, cannot be more pointedly, cautions - his conduct in other respects, is regular, and sober in the extreme - without any propensity to Vice. - The young Men of the garrison, with whom he associates, are only those, who are distinguished, for their good conduct, and by the Esteem in which they are held, in their respective Corps. - These must be placed as a counterpoise, to the ^{to which,} follies, he has hitherto been addicted - to induce him to persevere, Encouragement is necessary, and as his conduct is such, as justly to claim indulgence, unless he finds it in some degree productive - he may easily be induced, to relapse into the Errors, from which, he is but just emerging - Amongst other articles of unavoidable Expence - constitutes a part - If its being here, for the sake of continuing

- duties, to his instruction, and Employment - it also engages and always must, be a part of his Income - Wishing, very naturally, to have them appear, as much or more to advantage, than the other parts in Garrison, he spared no Pains, or Expence to effect it - and you will agree with me, in thinking; some donations are necessary, where more parade, powder, and Exercise, are required; than usual, or perhaps necessary - I only regret that the State of his Finances, are such - as not to permit me, to point out, some Instances, in which a smaller Sum - well applied, would do him honor - and probably save from India, one, or two young Men of merit - in their Profession, and the most excellent Characters - they are the Sons of Officers, and the difficulties, in which they are involved; not the result of Dissipation - but the unavoidable consequence of not being able to support themselves, on the pay of Subalterns, where almost every necessary, is only to be had, at an extravagant Price - I have written some time since, by the Princes Permission, to all his Lordships in England, to order them, to send him nothing more, and to furnish their Accounts - The Prince has also promised, to order nothing more from any of them —

45425

I mentioned to you, in the course of the Summer, how far I was from wishing, that any increase of Expence, should follow, an Addition to the Income of his M: Highness — whenever such an Event may take place; on the contrary, I hope, that being convinced of the possibility, that his Expences may be compriz'd, within the limits of what he receives at present — the Remainder might, and ought to be apply'd, towards discharging, some of his Trade's Bills in England; that such would be the Application of it — I have the strongest Assurance — Should his Majesty think it proper, to grant the Prince's Request, or any part of it — I hope the communication — will come, directly from the King himself — the good Effects to be produced, by his Royal Highness being inform'd, that his Majesty's Compliance, has been the consequence of his good Conduct, cannot be doubted — And that it is only by a Continuance of it — that the Prince, can expect a Compliance with his Desires, an Attention to his Wants, or issue a Continuance, of his Majesty's personal Care, and Affection.

153

During the extreme — that — of the Summer Months - the Prince's Stomach was vehemently afflicted with Bile, and to procure Relief, he had too frequently Recourse to Casticks - Adairs, our Surgeon Major - in whom we place great Confidence - at first indeed, but grew alarmed, at the Effects, caused by their too constant Use - to contract the Nerve's, they incidentally occasioned, he ordered Sea bathing, which materially diminished, but could not remove, the Complaint whilst the Heat continued - since the weather has grown cool, the Effects are equally advantageous - the Prince has recovered his looks, Appetite, and no longer suffers any inconvenience from his Stomach - We find, that a Difference of opinion, perhaps too strongly supported, in opposition, to the Ideas of our Political Leaders, is to remove from hence, General O'Hara, The Garrison finds, with no less surprise, than Regent, that he is not to succeed Sir Robert Boyd, as to Govt and the unequivocal Consent, with which, all Parties, see his approaching Departure - Since, that few if any, who have ever commanded here, have left more sincerely, or universally Regretted - To his disinterested Conduct, extreme Vigilance,

113 45426

157 177

17 Humanity, and Zeal for the Service of his Master — all are ready to bear Testimony — to the latter, in the opinions of a few, carried to an Excess he can only attribute, the very strong disapprobation, with which his conduct has been marked —

To Prince Edward, his Removal will be a real Misfortune, and I should hold myself unworthy, the Confidence, with which I have been honored, did I not declare — that what ever Advantages, the Prince may and I trust will in future derive, from his instruction and Residence here — to General O'Hara, he will have been indebted for it —

You know the Carefulness of his Disposition, and how usefully, he can communicate his Knowledge of the World — assisted by manners, so well calculated to please — both have been eminent, and constantly coveted, in suggesting to the Prince, what he might find useful — or guarding him, against, what was likely to prove disadvantageous —

155

Such hints

However necessary, You well know, requires more than common Address, to prevent their being thought unpalatable —

Adieu my Dear General, I think I shall hardly have occasion again, to trouble you with so long an Quistle — But

Believe me always

most truly and faithfully

Yours

My Dear General -

As I find that a postenters Recommendation to the East Indies may be of most essential Service to my Brother, I have made an application to Mr. Dundas on the subject worded as follows, and I trouble you with a copy of it as delivered to him, well assured that you will tell me if you think I have not put it in proper terms - You know he is now at the head of the Office in which my claim stands -

Memorandum from Capt. Craufurd -

" Lord Grenville is acquainted with the Particulars of Captain Craufurd's having been employed on the Government Service in Spain in the Summer of 1790 - and of his conversations with Mr. Keppel on the subject - Mr. Keppel informed Capt. Craufurd several times that something ought certainly to be done for him in consequence of the Service he performed, but

8 Capt
hitherto no notice whatever has been taken of it. Capt.
Cranford came up to London lately with an intention of requesting Mr. Reseman to make another application to Lord Grenville on this subject, but Mr. Reseman's illness and sudden departure for the West Indies prevented his seeing him. Captain Cranford now wishes entirely to relinquish any claim to notice himself provided Lord Grenville will procure him a ministerial recommendation, or one from the Court of Directors in favour of his Brother Capt.
Robert Cranford, who commands the 75th Regiment in the East Indies - Capt. Robert Cranford has commanded the 75th Regt. from the day they were raised in England, Lt. Col. Hartley and Major Hart having always been employed on the Staff - He is also perfectly well known to Lord Cornwallis, Generals Meadows and Abercromby, but as most of the advantageous appointments in the East Indies, where there are competitors of equal merit for them, are naturally given in consequence of recommendations from home, Captain Cranford is anxious to get such a recommendation for his Brother to the Governor General as will have this effect in his favour - "

Mr. Dundas received them, and said he would converse with Lord Grenville on the subject. I am in expectation of some answer soon, and I sincerely hope it may be favourable.
 45428 If this Campaign in India is successful I think it is most probable that some new Regiments may be raised for that Country. In case there should appear to be any foundation for my conjecture, that is should there be any such Rumour abroad, may I take the liberty to request that you will add to the great obligations

I am already under to you, by endeavouring to get my Brother appointed to one of the Majorities. I think Sir W. Dawkins might easily manage it. Or perhaps

The Duke of York would interest himself about it, if you would to speak to His H. Highness in his favour.
 He has now been above nine Years Captain, and I am sure he has taken as much pains to gain extensive knowledge in the Service as any Officer in it. Besides He has been eldest Captain to the 9th above 4 Years, and had the total charge of the this Regiment the whole time from its first raising to the present moment - Gordon, for whom Sir William Dawkins got a Majority, was not so old a Captain as my Brother, nor Dalrymple for Whom the Duke of Clarence got one last year - You will be ever upon us the greatest obligator by doing what you can to forward what of course we are so anxious about -

Remain, My Dear General, with the utmost thanks I beg
Your most faithful & greatly obliged servant

My Dear General,

I have a thousand thanks to return you for your most kind and interesting letter of the 9th instant, which should have been sooner acknowledged, but for the volume of Correspondence, which the Volunteering daily brings, & almost always with the additional obligation of answering them by return of post. I am delighted, as you will easily conceive, with the report of the zeal & exertions of my friend Lt Col. Hay, as also with the opinion you pass upon the talents of Lieut^t Galbraith, the Adj^t (who is one of our much lamented friend Parsonage's School) & upon the appearance of the few old Soldiers you saw on the Parade. I am perfectly sensible of the justice of your observations upon our boys, but as the evil you mention has been the unavoidable consequence of the very rapid recruiting we have had, it is one that need not & must not now recur, while at the same time the existing one will daily diminish. The want of Officers and Non Commissioned Off^{rs}, especially of Drills, to look after the mass of Recruits, that has of late poured in upon us, is certainly a just and a serious cause of complaint, but I fear that until the present period of volunteering is over, it cannot be removed, then however I am determined it shall be most effectually, and if you see the Battalion again in nine months from this time, provided we have but fair play, I think I will answer for its bearing the most minute investigation in all its points, for Lt. Col. Kay & Maj^r Muller are both most excellent Field Officers, Lt. Galbraith a first-rate Adj^t and our Corps of Captains generally superexcellent, so that with these aids collected & that of the fine stuff of non com. Off^{rs} which we shall get from our North British Volunteers, it will be hard indeed, if in time my 4th Battⁿ does not become everything I could wish to make it.

Before I conclude this letter, permit me to congratulate you on the satisfactory termination of the Expedition against Copenhagen, and forgive for once, if I do confess that it is not without some degree of vanity that I reflect, that Lt. Col. Napier who commanded the 92^d Reg^t with so much Gallantry, under Sir Arthur Wellesley in Zealand, as well as Lt. Col^s Oswald & Ross, who so nobly led the 20th & 35th Reg^{ts} at Maida under my friend Sir J. Stewart, & Maj^r Plenderleath who no less distinguished himself at the same place in the command of the 81th are all Elevés of mine, & learnt the first lessons of Discipline under my own tuition in the Fusiliers.

Having ever received from you every proof of friendship & attachment, I am sure you will join in rejoicing at this circumstance as decisively silencing those who, as you must well remember, animadverted so illiberally on the system, which I have invariably pursued, since I learnt it at the school of my old friend Col. Glover, & certainly had succeeded in establishing thoroughly at Gibraltar.

With every sentiment of the most friendly regard, and of the highest esteem, I remain,

My dear General,
ever your's
most faithfully
and
sincerely

The Duke of Kent presents his best regards to Mr Broughton, and having reason to believe, from something he heard yesterday, that the enquiries made respecting Mr. M. ———, have created suspicions, though utterly unfounded, yet of a very strange nature, both at the Foreign Office here, and at our Ambassadors at Paris, has now to request that if Mr Broughton is of opinion the further information he had undertaken to procure in distant parts of that subject, can occasion any thing further further of the post, he will rather abandon it, than run such risk, as in fact the object he had in view, when he put the question originally to Mr. Broughton, was simply one of curiosity, having heard the gentleman named as a very free speaker, and very far from being of such consequence to have induced him to pursue the inquiry, could he have conceived that ^{in fact} ~~it would~~ be attached to it, as a business case. - The Duke hopes the packet for Bradford, through only sent off this at six on Sunday evening last, was yet in time for that evening mail. -

My dear Sir

22

I have this day received your favor of the 8th. My answer for any objection, that if there was a difficulty in obtaining funds for any General post letters transmitted to you said, but the same might be applied to the other letters from the Admiralty, as well from one to the other and being sent post free, and and my inference from that circumstance probably it may not always be consistent to obtain the required funds at the moment, but I am happy to

Yours truly

know that in drawing that conclusion, I was under error. The packets allowed to be yours, that were deficient, and that ought to have come by the mail of the 20th Sept, already are not known in England, neither with the Bag of the 24th, but as they then came in safety, and nothing was particularly striking among them, no inconvenience arose from the delay. I should most readily accept your suggestion of putting the packets simply under cover to the Agent of Packets at Ostend, as was done, when the British Embassy was at the Hague, but for the enormous expense of postage to which I should be subject, if they did not come under the envelopes and, indeed, perhaps was this, during that short period, that I have already made every possible arrangement, whenever the respective mails for my other coming by the Hague, and from thence, under the British flag, to the present Ministers, the Count de Bernis, to be delivered to me, upon which subject I shall probably have occasion to apply you in the course of about six weeks hence, for I understand after the 25th of August, which is the King's will, a very general permission will be granted to the Foreign Ministers to proceed to the Hague, whenever they may see fit. I shall now only be able to assure you

Charles R. Broughton

Barry has explained to me, the mistake that occurred regarding the Governor's name which is of no importance as I am now enabled to be transmitted by the present mail to him, and to express the sentiments of friendly regard with which I am ever

Very yours for

My Dear Sir

I do myself the pleasure of acknowledging your favor of the 22nd Instant, and am very much obliged to you, for having so properly determined upon forwarding by my friend Sir Grenville Temple, the case covered with Cobain, and directed for me, from my illustrious friend the Duke de Berry, it contains I apprehend plans of his Villa at Bagatelle, which the Duke long since promised me, and which I have for some time past been looking out for. I have also to add, that the ^{prints} singularly pleased you received and accompanied by a letter to Captain Hauser, was destined for me, and comes from the Mother of an Unfortunate Convict under sentence of Transportation for life, at Shoarbury who solicited my intercession in his favor behalf. I have now to call your attention to the subjoined extract of a letter from Lord Clancarty to me, from which you will perceive that it will be necessary from after the receipt of this letter, to forward my correspondence by way of the Hague, viz. by the route of Harwich and Helvoetsluis, in the Bay to Lord Clancarty, who will then transmit the same to me, through the Government Postoffice, which is the only regular and expeditious means at his

45437 his disposal, of forwarding my letters to me free of postage; It will therefore be necessary to be particularly attentive to making the Packets as small as possible, confining them as nearly as you can to the shape of a common Sized letter, and as only one or two of the packets can be sent by each Postoffice, it would be desirable that you should number them as follows, N. 1 to be attached to the packet containing the letters from my own family, and Mr.

Histland, and Mr. Cuthbert, together with my Newspapers, N. 2, attached to the packet from Kensington, N. 3, to that containing any odd letters that may be received by you from other quarters.
 Of course whenever you have of an opportunity of opportunity of a Messenger coming direct to this, you will then avail yourself of such an occasion to forward any bulky packets or packages, that may have accumulated at your Office, but otherwise, until the return of the Embassy to Brussels this time, should nothing should be sent me by the Ambassador's Mail Bag, but packets of the small description I have before alluded to, and which are so particularly desired in Lord Carnarvon's Letter. I have now only further to express my best acknowledgments for your constant attention, and thank you for the absence of Mr. Huxtable to my concerns, and to conclude by subscribing myself with sentiments

It will of course follow that what we are thus limited in the means of conveyance for letters more extensive for the persons can be placed in my packet, nor will I forward any to you, after the mail of the 3rd of October, for other individuals, which I apprehend will be the last (is) dispatched by Messrs. from this place.

Extract of a letter from the Earl of Lincoln to Field-Marshal, His Royal Highness, The Duke of Kent, dated Sept. 23rd 1817.

Sir, I had the honor of receiving your Royal Highness' letter of the 23rd...
My motions here will certainly be regulated by those of the King, and if His Majesty shall as I had, leave Brussels on the 2nd of October, I shall endeavour to follow him as nearly about Brussels, as the arrangements for the conveyance of the Archives, will permit: -

I yesterday made known to Mr. Falck, to whose department the Estafette duty between the Hague and Brussels is principally attached, upon Royal Highness' wishes relative to the transmission of the correspondence, addressed to your Royal

45439

Royal Highness through the Hague Government Express; Mr. Falck says, that if the packets shall prove small and the number of letters few, he shall be happy to show his devotion to your Royal Highness, in paying some fee by each conveyance, But Mr. Falck acquaints me, that as the conveyance is merely a Horse Express already sufficiently charged with the ordinary papers of Government, the King himself cannot spare more than small letters by it, and that therefore for packets of any degree of bulk he cannot undertake.

I shall not fail upon the arrival of Mr.
Falck at the Hague, to transmit to his Office for conveyance to Brussels, such papers as may be forwarded in the Dispatch Boys

"Ways from England to Your Royal Highness "address, with a view however to avoid "disappointment, I should take the liberty "of humbly suggesting to Your Royal "Highness, the propriety of holding in "France, the very kindest permission "for me to visit, attend the carriage "of correspondence by Government Express

 My Dear Sir
 The Duke of Kent desires me to enclose to you the accompanying Money covers, from which you will perceive that instead of being sent by the Ambassador's Bag to the Hague, they arrived here this week from London, with a heavy charge of Eighteen francs postage, in consequence of Lord
 on the 5th. I will not add, of course His Royal Highness being subject
 C. R. Broughton Esq
 H 105-1

Capt Bessell Hervey to Charles R Broughton to the inland postage from Antwerp, the moment his letters are not covered by the Ambassadors' frank, The Duke accounts for this error, from its not being known at the Foreign Office that His Lordships had removed from Brussels, but thought it right, that you should be apprised of the circumstance without delay to prevent its recurring, otherwise the division of the packets is exactly what His Royal Highness wished, and he has commanded me to thank you kindly for your attention to

to that point. 45441 I am desired to add, that the family of Lord Robert FitzGerald left this on the 4th for Paris, Lady Robert in very debilitated health, and that before her arrival this day dated Rome on the way from Courmayeur to Paris on the morning of the 9th His Royal Highness has learnt with much concern, that Her Ladyship had been attacked with an increase of fever, which might perhaps detain her two or three days more before she could reach her journey's end.
 187 indeed indeed the Duke is not without considerable uneasiness, as to the effect of the ensuing winter upon a constitution so weakened as the Lady's, and so worn down by affliction, especially after being subject to so fatiguing a journey at such an advanced season of the year, and after so long and painful an illness, as she has undergone.

I remain

My Dear Sir!
Yours faithfully
P. Murray
