Mr. Pitt

Sir

On my return this moment from the House of Lords, I have been honoured with your Majesty's commands, accompanied with the Seals of the For-eign Department.

Nothing pass'd in the House of Lords, except a tedious conversation upon the clauses of the Establishment Bill, supported by The Chamberlain and Lord Stormont on one side, the Duke of Richmond and myself on the other very shortly.

The Duke of Richmond condemn'd in very strong terms Mr Fox's precipitate and unadvis'd conduct.

about the Persons, who may be to fill up the vacant Offices, to which I have agreed provided he does not put me under the difficulty of a Negative on any particular Man, and that it does not interfere with conversations which I have already had. Lord Kippie does not seem ill disposed.

I have the honour to be
