The Lord Chamberlain cannot delay, till he sees your Majesty, offering his most humble, and most grateful, Acknowledgements for the great Favour, which he has received from your Majesty.

Whilst he lives, he shall carry about him the valuable Token, which your Majesty has been pleased to present to him, as a Mark of your Majesty's condescending & gracious Appearance of his most humble Services to His King and Master: and he trusts that, as long, as Providence shall permit him to have any Descendants, they will never fail to cherish and value, as he ever shall, this proof of your Majesty's great kindness to your Subject.

Subject and Servant.

His humble wish is that He, and His Descendants may, in all time to come, be enabled to direct their Conduct, <sup>as your Majesty has prescribed,</sup> by the Dictates of Religion, and by the Rules of that Justice, which, not being afraid to know the Bandage from its Eyes, will never hesitate to execute its righteous Purposes, at the hazard of all the Consequences, which may be within its View.
