Private, Chatham, Cores. III 273

Lord Chatham most humbly begs leave to lay himself with all duty and submission at the King's feet, wholly unable to express what he feels from the most condescending marks of His Majesty's infinite goodness in deigning to bestow a thought upon the health of a devoted servant. Such as that health still remains, may He be permitted most humbly to submit to His Majesty, that his entire confidence is placed in Doctor Addington, who gives him the strongest assurances of recovery, with proper time. as he relies on these assurances, He ventures most humbly to implore that He may be allowed still to pursue the same Directions, without the Intercession of another Physician. It is with the deepest Sense of the Grace and Prostration extended to Him by the most gracious of Royal Masters that He prostrates Himself before His Majesty's Goodness, with some hope of pardon, for presuming to lay most humbly at His Majesty's Feet such a Petition.
