

Lord Hertford

7th January 1768

729

Lord Hertford presumes, as it he hopes without taking an improper liberty to express by the earliest occasion their Majesty's great goodness in the appointment of Lord Hertford to the Queen's bedchamber; he cannot though he has the happiness of such frequent access to the King express such sentiments as a publick Service nor would it become him to trouble his Majesty too often in the Court; This morning when he had the honor of seeing the King he was unacquainted with the honor done to his Wife; Lord Hertford is no doubt as a warm and grateful heart & can wish him to all the

His Majesty's grace and goodness to Him I will endeavor to testify it in every instance within his power by a suitable conduct.

Greenwich square
Jan. 27, 1746.