

[Nov 2 1749]

Sir

The enclosed letter will much better explain Her Royal Highnesses sentiments, than it is in my power to do. I received Her Commands last night to have it delivered safe to your hands, & I called my self that I might be sure it would be put in your own hands. If I could meet with you at home, or at least deliver it to some careful servant of yours. If you were at home I should likewise have an opportunity of specifying some things which I do not care to trust to paper.

The Princess was a good deal concerned that she could not contrive to see you, previously to the conversation you will have next Sunday, but it was impossible, for I assure you (that I signify as I am) she could hardly compass last night to speak to me alone. There hapned what appears to me a ridiculous scene in Pubwick, when she was at the Play, & I think Mr Do. acted a part on the Stage, which I should have been very unwilling my self to have played; when I have the hon^r. to see you, I will tell it you. If I can judge at all he will very soon be piqued, & seems in a very fair way to expose himself in a new manner. The noble Person you was pleased to mention, did as I hear speak very plainly on Sunday Evening

last, I believe I told you he was with the Prince when I received the ^{R.M.} Commands about the Paper.
 I could wish Dad. had never come in to the Family, as his retreat will open mouths, but it will be better to submit to that, than if he should remain, which all Circumstances considered I think scarce possible.
 He has shew'd himself already in no advantageous light to the P. & the complains (& really not very wisely) to several Persons of the great reserve he meets with. as I hope to have the hon^r. to see you at Leicester House next Sunday before the Drawing room begins, I shall only add what I have in Command from the Princeps which is that you may depend upon the absolute, & unreserved Confidence in you alone, as a Person whose merit, & attachment to the P. the self & Family she is firmly convinced of, & desires you will freely offer all your Sentiments

Cressett
Nov 2 - 1749

to Her, which she will ever pay the greatest regard to, & consider as a proof of your attachement to Her & The Family. I confess I cannot do Justice to H. M. S. excellent way of Thinking by any expressions of my own on the Subject. Her Prudence, Secrecy, & delicacy of conduct are beyond what is to be expected, in gene= ral from the Sex, but she is elevated in Her Sentiments above others, more than even in Rank of life, & Providence has best her with the virtues proper for the High Station in which she is placed.
I am with the sincerest esteem, inviolable regard, & with respect

Thursday.

Rec^d 2^d Nov^r 1749

Sir

Your most humble & most obedient & faithful Servant
James Cressett.