

Duke of Portland

Nov. 3 1798

9061 — 2

The Duke of Portland most humbly conceives it to be his duty in laying the Lord's answers before Your Majesty to obtain to Your Majesty that it is under the consequence of a representation from the American Minister on the behalf of the Government of the dangerous consequences which he apprehended would arise from the ^{supposed} French Treachery to send a vessel to rescue in America for ever so short a time which the Duke of Portland has met with transmitted the substance of to the Lord Lieutenant, as also the opinion of Your Majesty's Law Officers that no Power had a right to transport its Troops into the Territories of a State with which it was in amity without having previously obtained the consent of such State; which was communicated to the Lord Lieutenant at the same time.

Considering that by the ordinary course of the Post the signification of Your Majesty's pleasure respecting the attendance of the University of

Duke of Portland

9062

and, as also the Duke had a right to the whole of the consent of such as at the same time.

But the significance of the University

Cambridge, can not be made to the Vice-Chancellor rather than Tuesday, the Duke of Portland submits with all humility to Your Majesty whether your Majesty will please to command them to attend at St. James's sooner than the week after next.

Buckingham
Saturday night 3^d Nov. 1798.

The Duke of Portland humbly begs leave to attend to the Majesty

His Majesty that no dispatches or accounts of any sort from Ireland have been received to day excepting that of the Lord Lieutenant which is herewith submitted to your Majesty.

Duke of Devonport
Whitehall 22 Nov^r 1790

Earl Spencer.

Admiralty. 6th Nov. 1790.

9063

Earl Spencer has the honour to lay before your Majesty the Proceedings of a Court Martial held on two Sailors of the Diamond one of whom is ordered to death, and as there are no circumstances of Merit in his Case Earl Spencer feels it his Duty to submit to your Majesty that the Sentence should be carried into Execution.

Earl Spencer also has the honour of laying before your Majesty Letters that have been received this morning from Lord Duncan, and from Ireland.

The King's Most Excellent Majesty,

The very humble Petition of Henry Lloyd, ~~late~~ late Fellow of Trinity College, and, at this Time, Regius Professor of Hebrew, at Cambridge, Sheweth,

That, if ever it was particularly necessary for the sacred Light of Scripture to shine before Men, with full, and unclouded Splendor, it is so, in this Age of Irreligion, and Infidelity.

That, with an earnest Wish to counteract the baneful Effects of some modern Publications, The Petitioner has given public Lectures, explaining the Scriptures, in their Original Language, to a respectable Audience in the University of Cambridge; where sacred Studies would easily be revived, were the Hebrew Professor encouraged to give gratuitous Instruction.

That the Petitioner's first Ambition is to be able to persevere, with Effect, in the Discharge of this most important Duty.

Nov. 6 1798

Rev. Henry Lloyd. Petitioner

9064

That, notwithstanding the plain Intention of The Royal Founder, King Henry 8.th, and the subsequent express Desire of King James 1.st that some high Ecclesiastical Dignity should be annexed to the Hebrew Professorship, (as is actually the Case, in the Sister University.) no Addition whatever has been made to the original £40. a year: a scanty Provision for a Royal Professor, with a Wife, and an increasing Family!

That, the Petitioner being likely to derive no solid Advantage from his high, & Academical Honours; or the friendly Disposition shewn him by some exalted Characters, (among whom he may reckon His Grace The Archbishop of Canterbury; the Bishops of Ely, & Landaff; The Vice Chancellor, and Masters of Colleges at Cambridge) Real Necessity induces him to solicit, what it shall be the Study of his whole Life to merit, from a Monarch, never indifferent to the Interests of Religion, some Assistance to his Endeavours in the Revival of Sacred Literature, among those who are to be Teachers of it, and Stewards of the Mysteries of God!

And The Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

Sir

I am unable to express the sense I have of your Majesty's goodness in honouring me with the gracious Letter of the th from Windsor, this moment received. It is full of that unaffected piety, & generous concern for the good of your people, & indeed of all Europe, which has distinguished your Majesty's reign, so replete with extraordinary events. It pleases God to discipline your virtues by unusual trials, & I hope, to lead us all to repentance and reformation by your means. Accept, Sir, my warmest congratulations on the striking success of your fleets, & courage as well as conduct of your seamen, in a part of the globe, whence your Majesty's glory will spread itself to the utmost bounds of it; while we at home are also rejoicing at the blessing ^{as} God has given to your army, & endeavours to protect your dominions from the most malignant enemy that has appeared in the world. May we profit, as we should do, by so signal an instance of divine favour!

It is with infinite pleasure we understand that your Majesty, and the Queen, & the Royal Family have returned in good health from Weymouth. Princess Amelia's complaint is of that sort, & her R. Highness so young, that a speedy & perfect recovery may, we hope, be expected.

Your Majesty is pleased to take notice of some late exertions in my office. I wish they were in all parts of it, such as they ought to be. But age, and the infirmities of age forbid this, but will never I think lessen the veneration & duty, with which I am,

Sir,

Your Majesty will be pleased to accept my best thanks for your condescension in forwarding the Göttingen exercises to me. I suppose they now lie at Worcester, to ^{the} place I will send for them. I shall not be able to read them with any attention. But I hope your University continues to deserve your Royal favour & protection, in spreading good principles in Religion & Government - all around them.

It has been thought on Consideration that it may be more prudent to omit any Reference to the intended Measure of Interval must elapse before any communication on the subject can be made to the Irish Parliament, and as it might not be advantageous to announce the intention publicly, the further preparatory measures have been taken for preventing an hasty opposition arising in Ireland.

Callands November 10. 1798

Sir

I have the Honor to report to Your Majesty that I met M^r Pitt this morning by appointment at M^r Dundas's, when he mentioned to me that accounts had been received from Holland which could be relied upon that the French Troops have been for the most part moved out of Holland into Brabant on account of the Insurrection and that the Dutch are so exceedingly discontented with the French that if a Body of Troops could be sent there, it would be easy to seize upon Flushing. He added that it was intended to run as little risk as possible at that therefore a confidential Person had been sent over to Holland and that nothing was to be undertaken till this return, but that of His report was as favourable as there was every reason to suppose, that it would be necessary for the Troops to be almost instantaneously embarked and that therefore every preparation must be secretly made without loss of time, and that being aware that there was not a sufficient body of Infantry in Great Britain to form such a Corps particularly at so very short a notice he accordingly wrote that Your Majesty would allow a Detachment of Foot Guards to be employed upon this service I answered Mr. Pitt that I certainly would lay his request before Your Majesty. and I thought it my duty to trouble Your Majesty with this letter, as I understand that Mr. Dundas
