

Jan. 1. 1811.

REGD 116 11/175

Sir

I found on my return to Windsor yesterday that the King had had a more decided remission of his symptoms than had appeared before - but His Majesty was a good deal influenced, in the evening, in his conversation by the delusions which have prevailed in his mind. The King has passed a quiet night tho' with but little sleep, and His manner and conversation are both ~~rather~~ more correct than we have observed them to be late.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect and attachment, your Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Halford

Jan^y 1. 1811.

Godolphin St.

Windsor Castle

Jan. 2. 1811.

TCED | 16 | 1 | 176

Sir

The King has passed a tolerably good night. having had between three and four hours sleep without interruption - at the early part of the night. His Majesty is not free from the delusions this morning. but his conversation this morn'g is mild - and his manner less irritable than we have often observed it. I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's

faithful servant

Henry Halliday

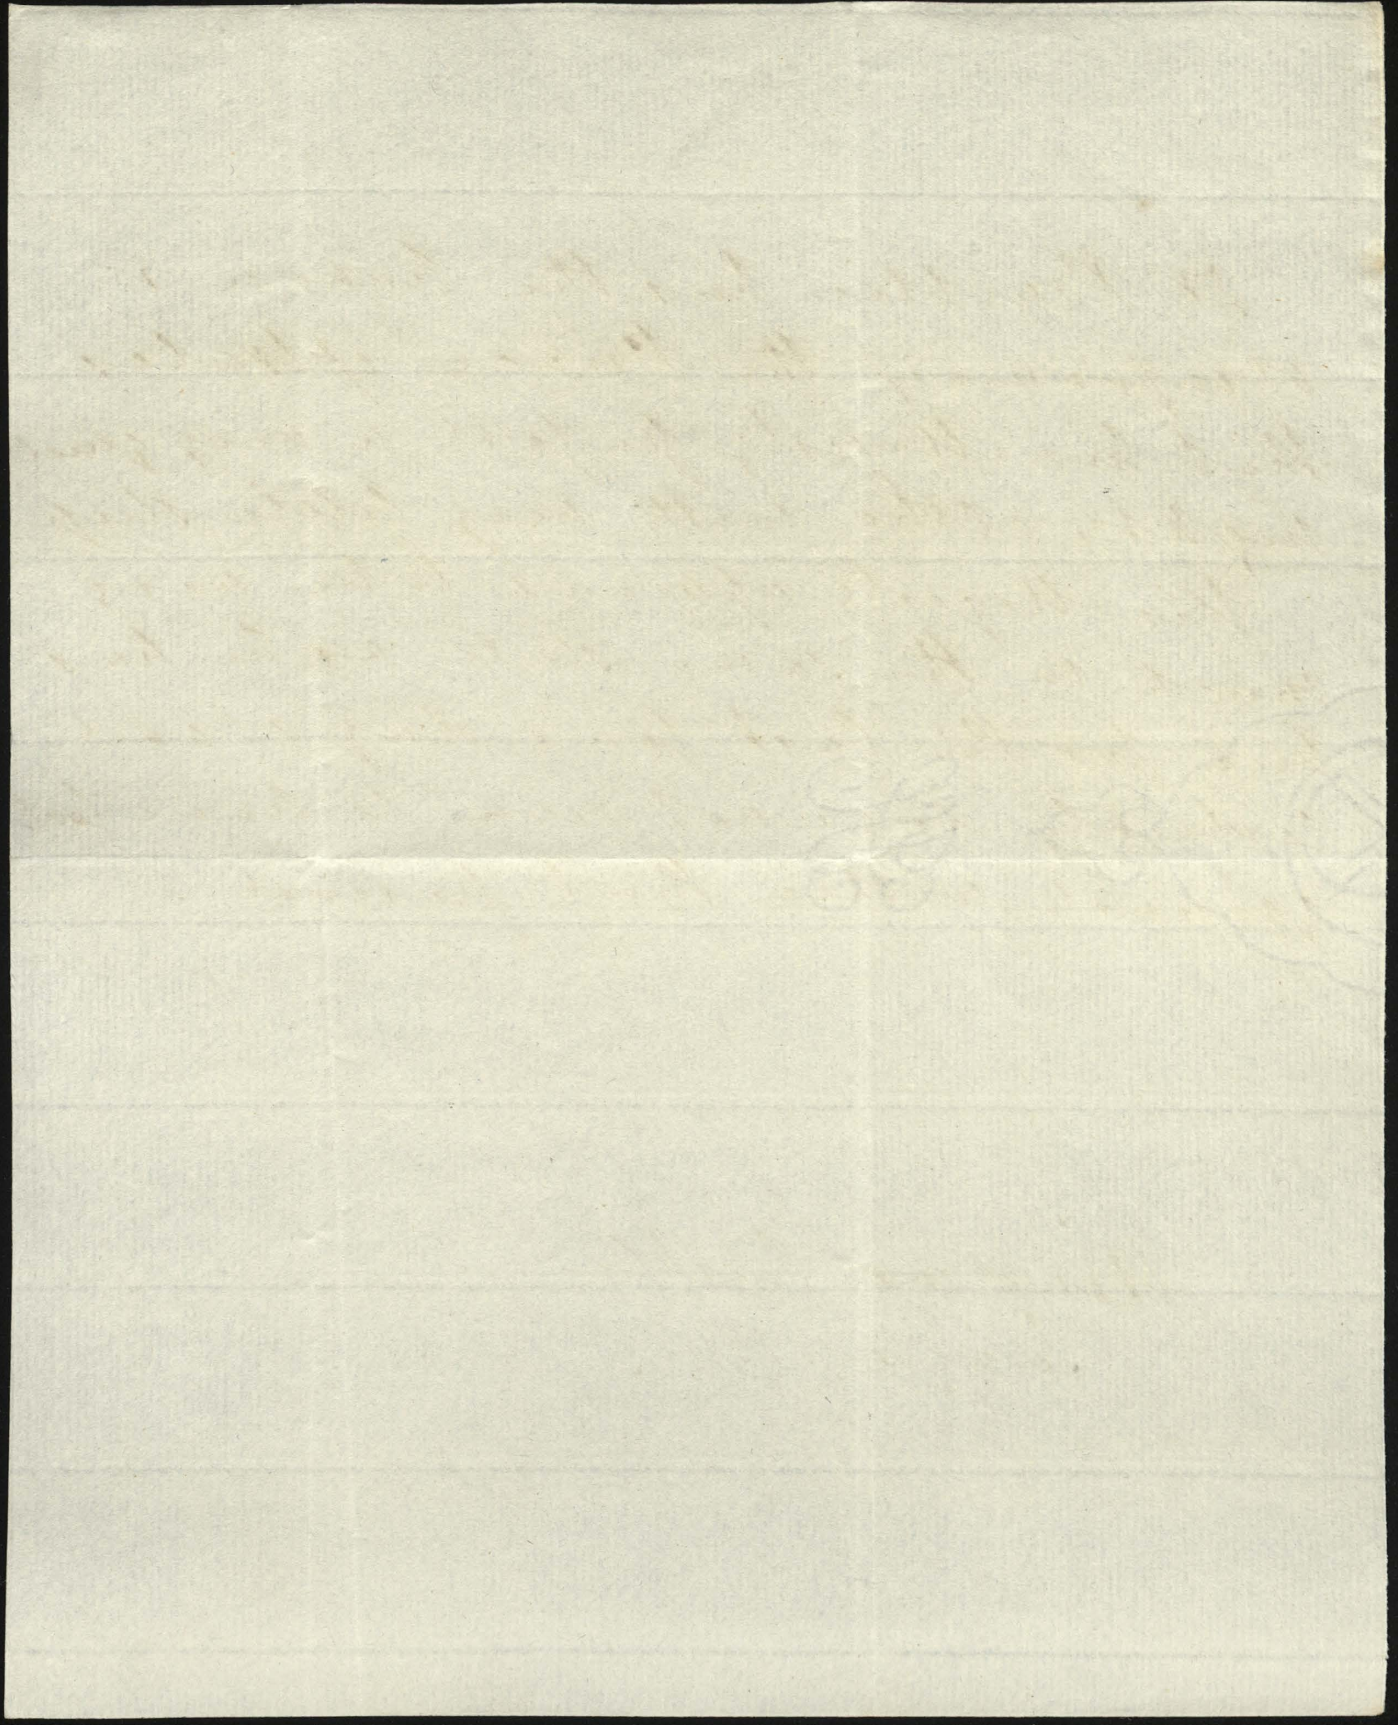

Jan 7. 2. 1811 -

POST

FEB 16 11 177

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales that his Majesty passed a very quiet night, altho' with very little sleep — His Majesty appears to be very much in the same state as he has been for the last four days, and certainly does not seem to have lost ground within that period —

Windsor Castle
Jan: 3 — 1811.

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales
that his Majesty has passed ano-ther quiet ^{night}, altho' he did not sleep more than an hour and a half
- His general manner and his con-versation have improved within these few days, but he is not free from the influence of his usual delusions —

Windsor Castle
Jan: 4 — 1811

[Faint, illegible handwriting in cursive script, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

1811

1000 116 11 179

Saturday Jan: 3rd

Windsor Castle

Sir

Our King pass'd the last night very quietly, but did not sleep more than two hours and a half, and that by tea minutes or a quarter of an hour at a time - His Majesty's manner this morning is good humoured and his conversation of a better kind than it was yesterday - for in the course of the day, there came on more irritation, and the delirium returned frequently -

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's faithful servant

J. L. M. —

Henry Belford.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged, yellowed paper with horizontal lines.]

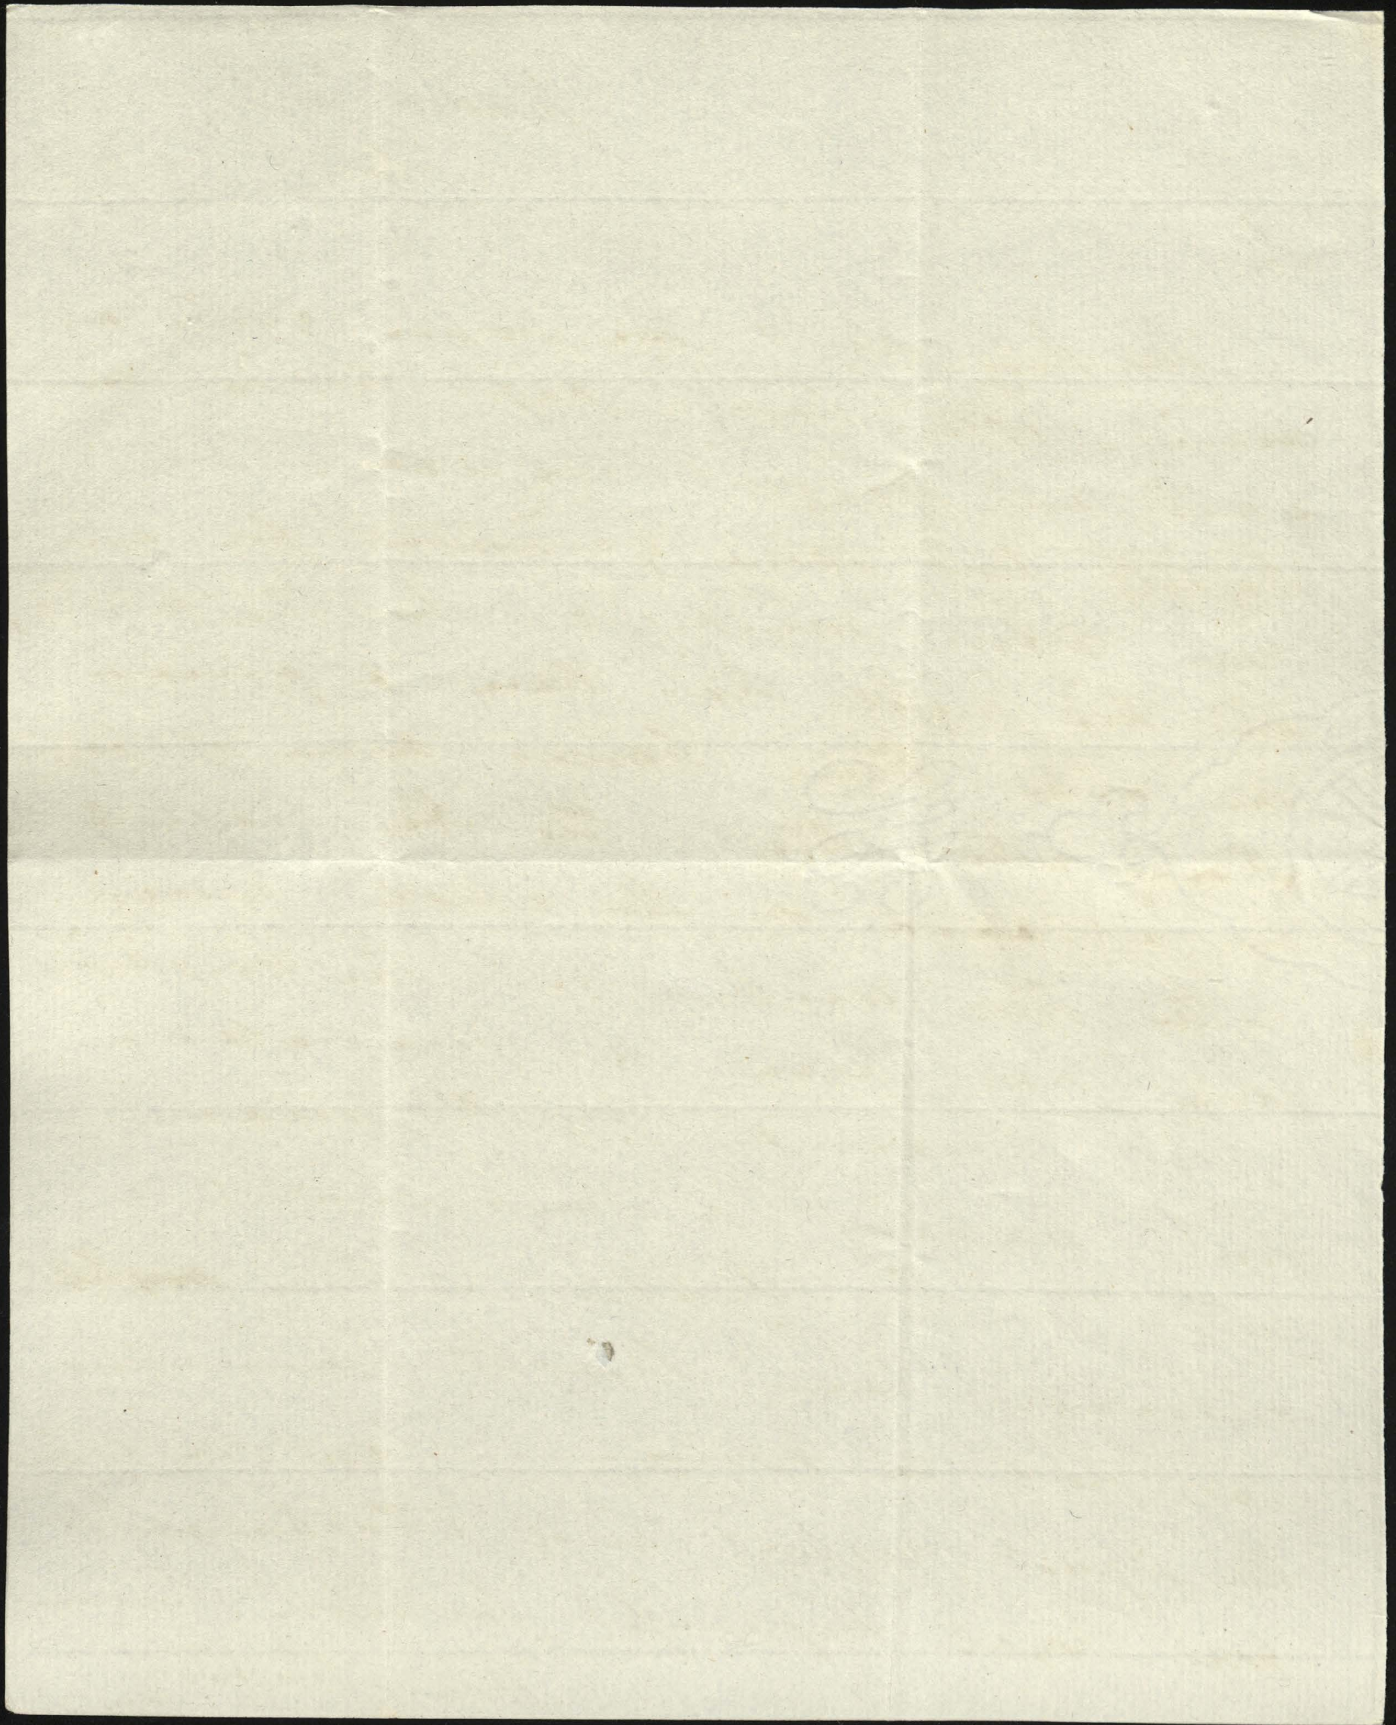

1811

MED 116/1/180

Windsor Castle
Jan. 6th 9. A.M.

Sir

The King slept two hours yesterday evening, after having passed his day in a mild and tranquil manner. His Majesty had some excitement for an hour before midnight - but this subsided, and his night has been a quiet one with three hours more of sleep. I may add that His Majesty has appeared on the whole much better this week - yet the reigning idea has been so prevalent as to prevent the Physicians from making so favourable a report to the Public, as they might otherwise have thought themselves justified in doing. I am, Sir, with the highest respect and attachment your Royal Highness's faithful servant
 Henry Hallifax

REC'D 16 11 1811

Sir

We have heard of the delusion in His Majesty's mind this morning than at any time for the last three weeks.
His still enough has escaped the King in conversation to satisfy us that he is not free from it. The night has pass'd very quietly - The King has had about four hours sleep since he went to bed, and His manner is very mild and good humoured.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect your Royal Highness's faithful

Servant

Henry Balford

Jan^y 7th 1811 -

Mr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince of Wales that his Majesty has passed a very good night - He slept upwards of five hours & when awake was composed - His Majesty's conversation yesterday and during the night has been less mix'd with the subject of his delusion than it has been lately - This morning He made some enquiry about the Army in Portugal, the state of Cadix, and the effect of the late storms upon the British Shipping, and hinted only a little at the subject which has so much occupied his thoughts -

Windsor Castle Jan 8 - 1811

Dr Guille has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales
that his Majesty has passed another good night - He had rather more than four hours sleep - While awake his Majesty was often for a considerable time silent, and when he spoke, his conversation ^{was mild,} and more free from delusion than usual -

Windsor Castle.

Jan: 9 - 1811

MEO 16 11 184

Jan: 10th 1871.

Sir

The King has certainly been better within the last few days. His Majesty's convalescence is now constantly mild and good humoured - not free from the delusions by any means - but they recur less frequently - and are not dwelt upon so obstinately. The King's discourse to day has been almost entirely occupied in inqui-ries after individuals in whom he has been used to feel an interest - but he has not yet expressed any desire to see the Royal Family. His Majesty's looks and his strength are both improved.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect and attachment, your Royal Highness's
faithful servant

Henry Ralford.

P.S. The King kept about four hours last night at intervals.

MGED 116/1/185

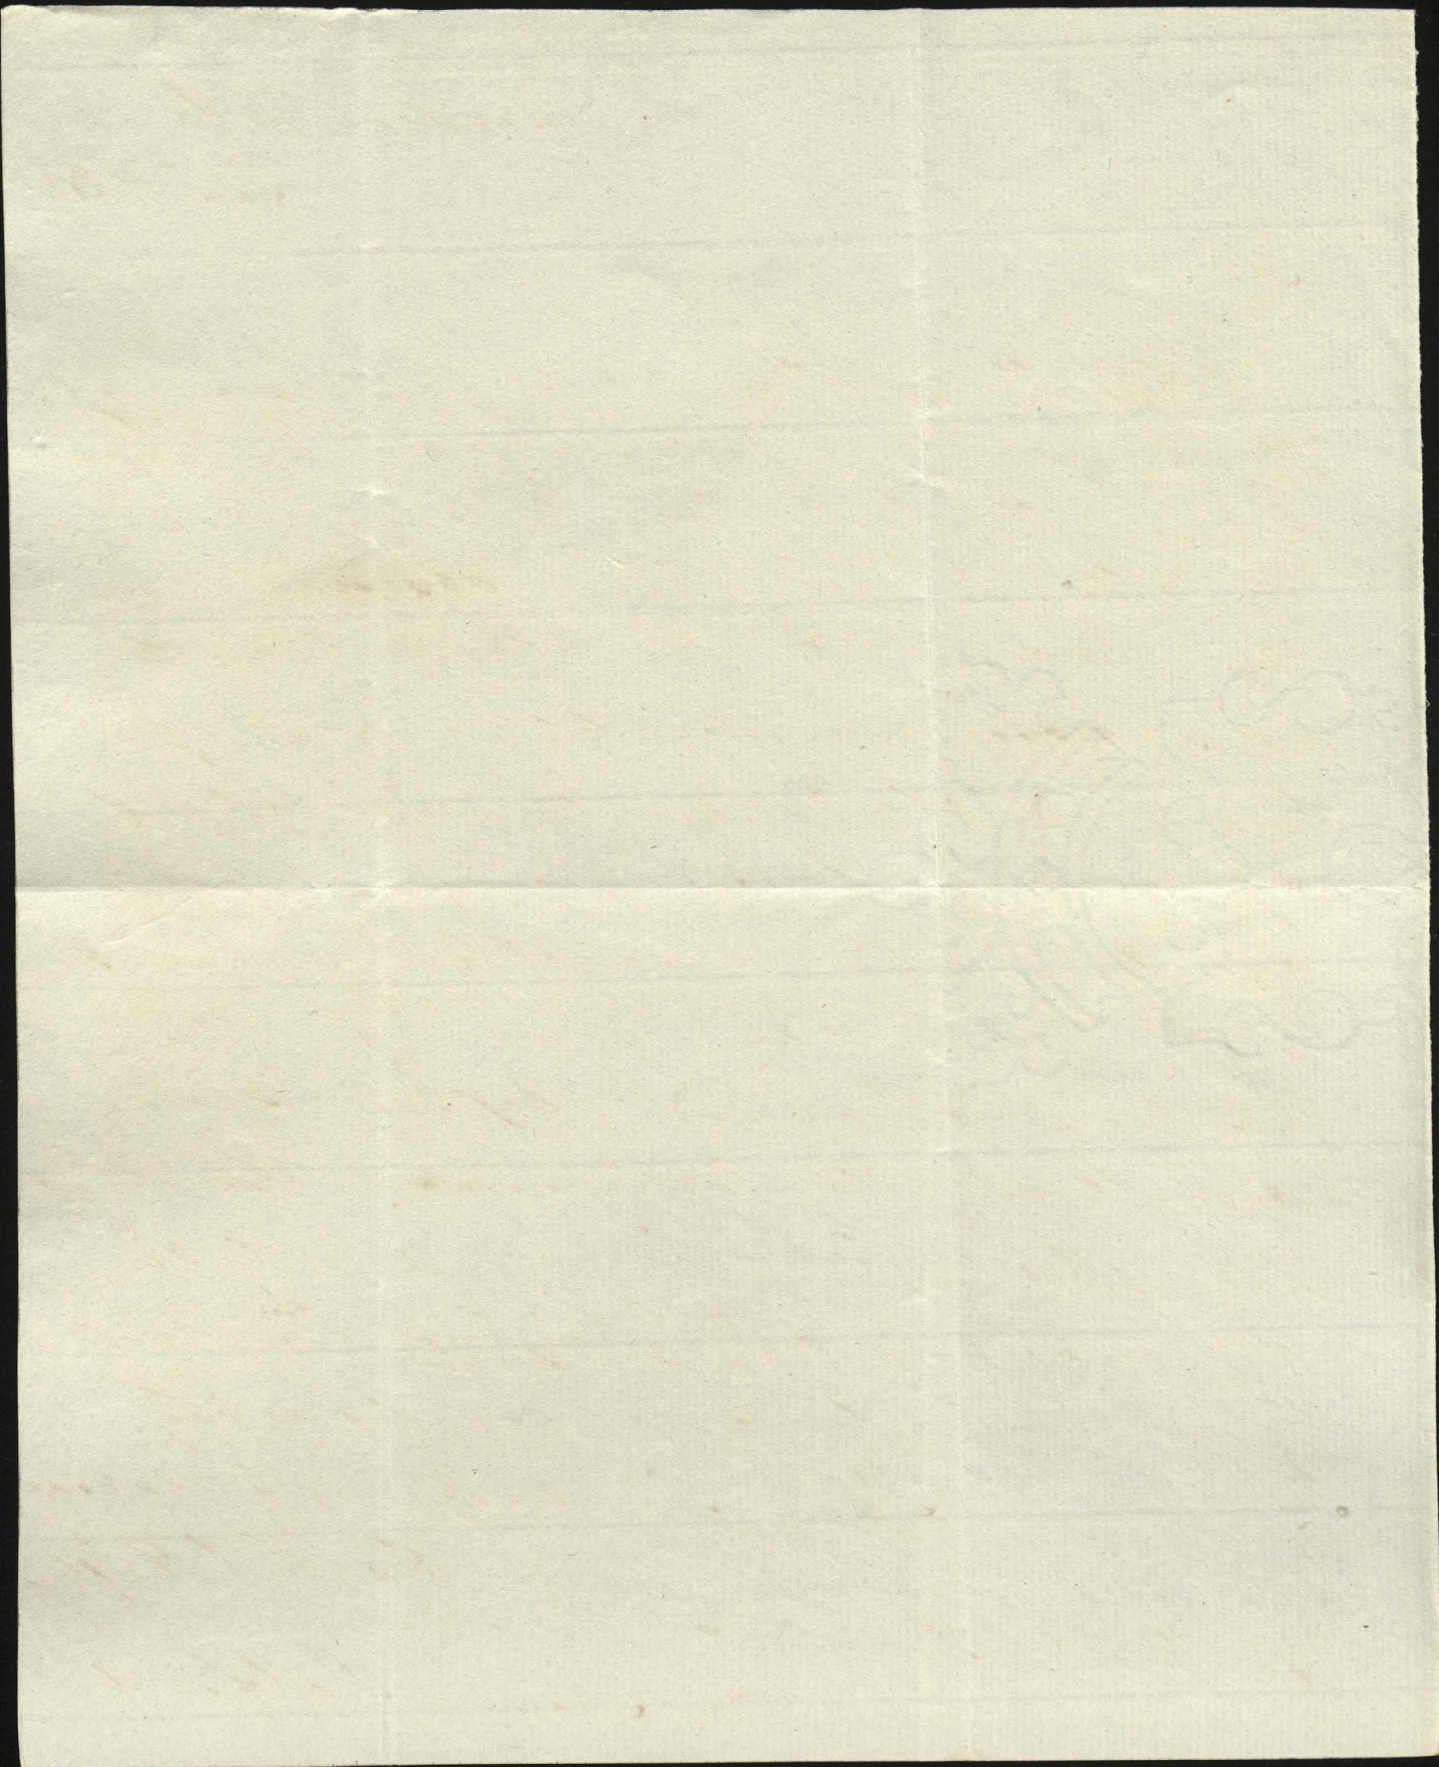

Windsor Castle

Jan^r. 11. 1871.

Sir

Protho the matter and manner of the King's conversation have improved within the last twenty four hours.
An allusion has been observed from time to time to the old subjects - but a ~~more~~ considerable space of time has elapsed during which His Majesty has spoken quite collectedly and rationally since I wrote yesterday morning, than has been observed before since His illness commenced. The King had about four hours sleep in the night - and passed the rest of it calmly and composedly.

I am, Sir, with high respect and attachment your Royal Highness
faithful servant
Henry Hatford.

MSD 116/1/186

Sir

Altho' we could not, perhaps, point out any particular circumstances which distinguished yesterday as a worse day than several which had preceded it, yet it struck us that His Majesty did not conduct him so satisfactorily as he has done lately.

The delusions recurred rather more frequently, but His Majesty's conversation was still mild and good-humoured.

The King has had about three hours sleep in the course of the night at different times - appeared more irritable, than he has been lately, for a short time - and very nervous.

upon the whole we do not think His Majesty quite so well this day - but we do not see sufficient ground to apprehend a Paroxysm at present in the symptoms.

I am, Sir, with highest respect Your Obedient & faithful

Servant

Henry Kalford

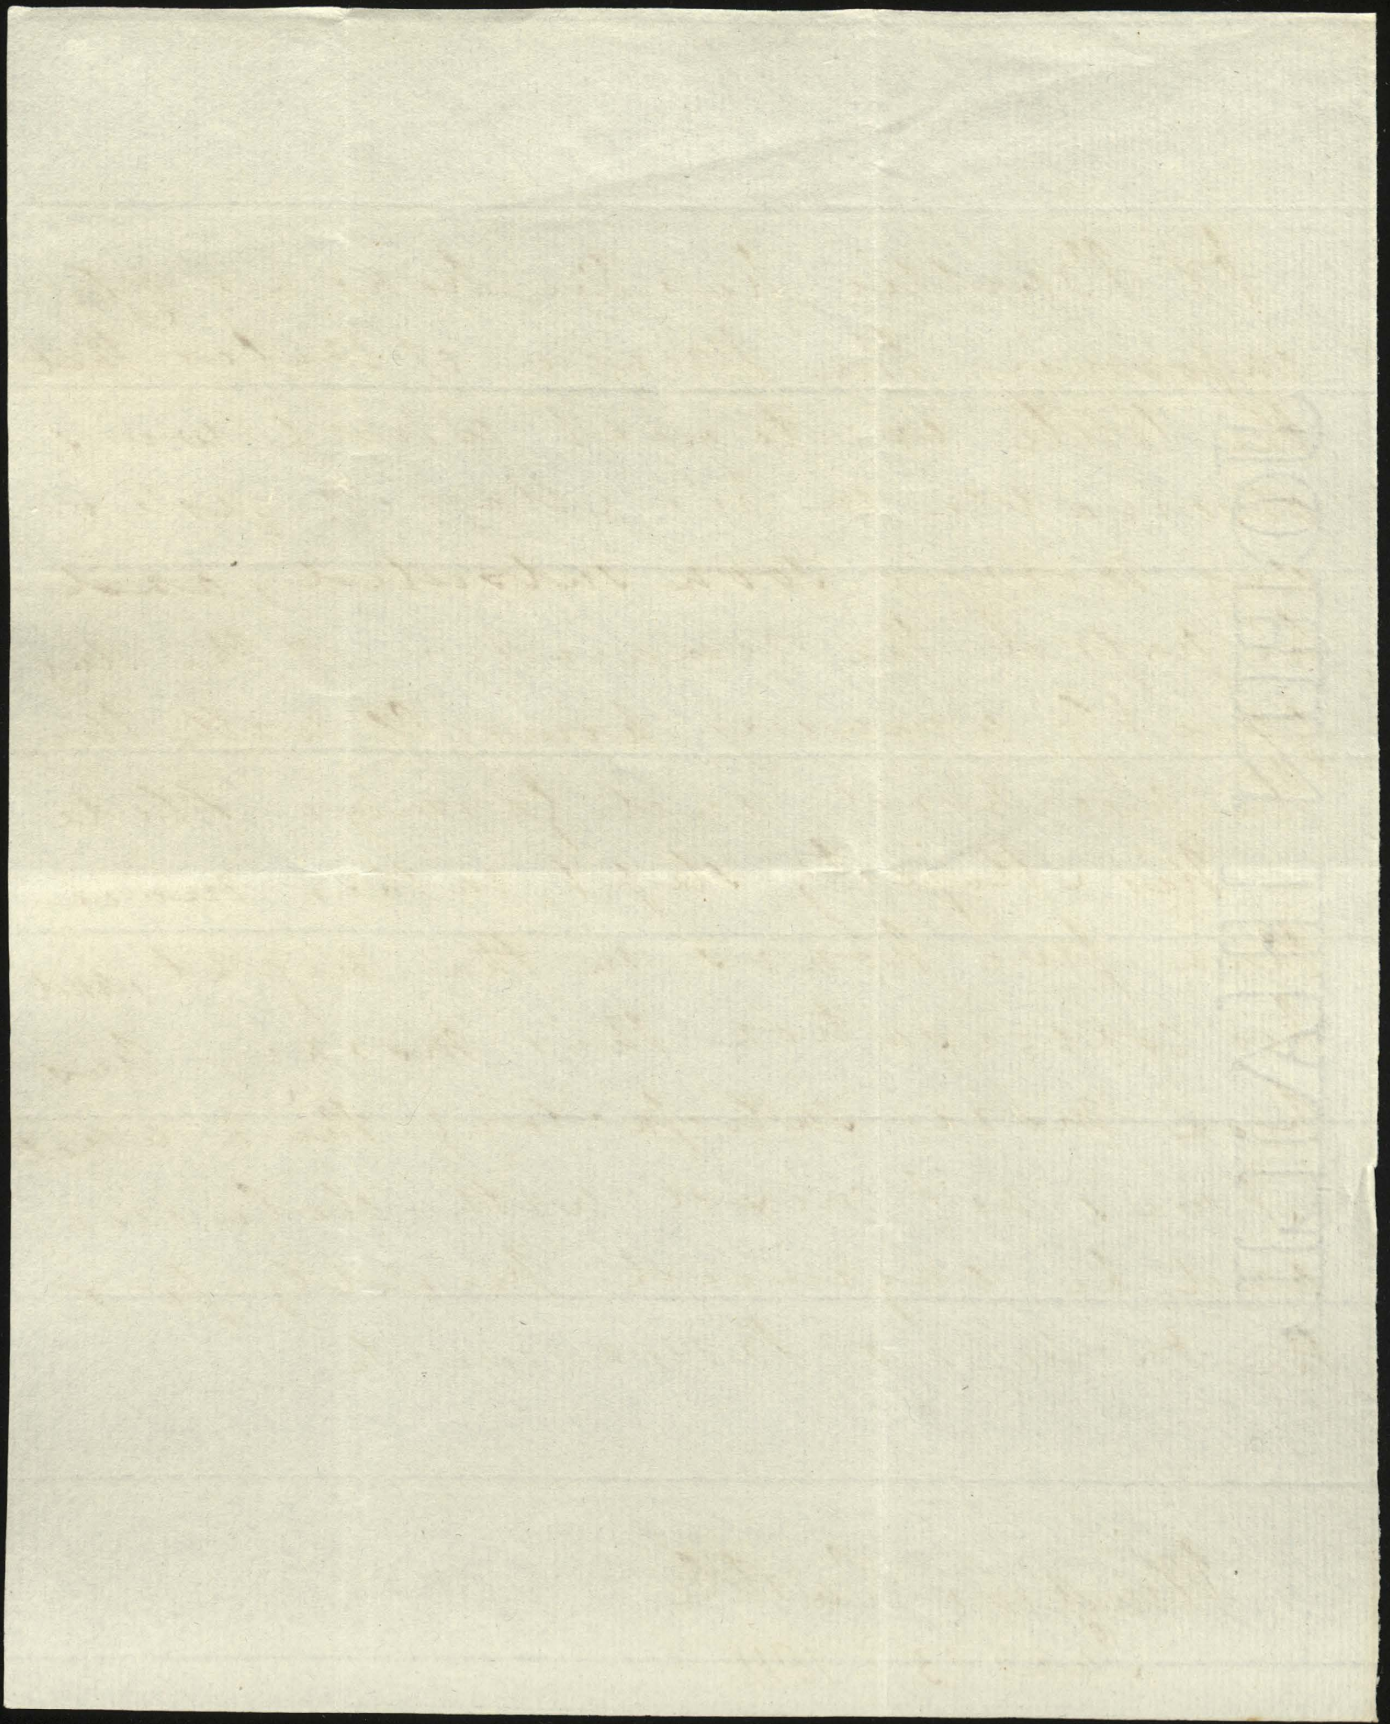

Jan: 12. 1810

MSO 116 11 187

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince of Wales that the little excitement which was observable in his Majesty yesterday morning soon subsided, and he passed the remainder of the day quietly, amusing himself with the Harpsichord and German Flute — His Majesty slept rather more than five hours in the night, and his conversation this morning has been more satisfactory than usual — It was not mixed with delusion, and he enquired kindly for the bishops of Brunswick —

Windsor Castle

Jan: 13 — 1811

MEED/16/1/188

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales
that his Majesty has passed upon the whole a good night
- He slept a little more than three hours, and his conversation when awake was but very little mix'd with delusion - This morning there was no trace of delusion whatever in his Majesty's conversation, but his manner was a little more eager than it has sometimes been

Windsor Castle

Jan 14 - 1811

Lii
/

I found the King on my return yesterday afternoon very much as I left His Majesty on Saturday, that is to say, His Majesty's manner continued composed. He had amused himself with a Flute as well as the Harpsichord, and the delusions recurred now and then. The King has passed a quiet night with more than three hours sleep, and I think His Majesty's conversation this morning has been less exceptional than I have observed it. It was entirely free from any allusion to his errors during my stay in the room - but I learn from one of my colleagues who continued a little longer there, that the King did speak for a short time under the influence of his delusions. Upon the whole, I cannot hesitate to opine your Royal Highness that His Majesty is a good deal better.

But enough of wrong remains to render it probable that it will be some time before the King recovers entirely.

It was very satisfactory to me to answer some very kind inquiries which His Majesty made after your Royal Highness. He expressed a hope that your Royal Highness had not felt any more consequences

From your accident on your way to Windsor - and desired to know when your Royal Highness was here last - I answered, "some days ago" - The thing did not follow this up by any expression of a wish to see your Royal Highness.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, and attachment your
Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Hallford.

Jan. 15th 1811.

Windsor Castle -

Sir R. Halford
Jan 15. 1871

MEO/16/1/190

Windsor Castle

Jan^y: 16: 1871.

Sir

I have but little to add to my report to your Royal Highness, sent yesterday - His Majesty passed the day very quietly, convalesced mildly - now and then for a very short time under the influence of his cough - and has slept about four hours in the course of the night -

The King's health is not yet what it ought to be - but we consider it as a little better.

I am, Sir, with high respect
Your Royal Highness's faithful

Servant Henry Balfour.

REC'D 116/1/191

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince of Wales that his Majesty slept somewhat less than two hours — While awake his Majesty was tranquil, and his conversation was very little mix'd with delusion — This morning he appears much in the same state as he has been for the last two or three days —

Windsor Castle
Jan: 17—1811

TLED 116/1/192

Dr Bullie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales
that his Majesty had about four hours sleep last night.

His conversation has been mild and generally good, but occasionally is mix'd with error. His Majesty walked upon the Terrace yesterday for an hour between Three and Four o'clock without fatigue, and was less excited by this first trial than could have been expected. He was not more than in good spirits, and felt much refresh'd from the influence of the air.

Windsor Castle Jan 10-1811

Jan. 19. 1811

MS. A. 1. 1. 193

Sir

I found on my return to Windsor yesterday afternoon that the King had been upon the Terrace again - but finding it cold had returned to his apartments at the end of ten minutes. His Majesty's conversation had a good deal of delusion mixed with it both in the evening, and in the latter part of the night - but the King kept, in the whole, nearly firm hours - His manner is rather eager and hurried to day - but during our visit, did not betray his usual errors. He then seemed to be some allusion to them while Mr Dundas, who conversed a little longer than the Physicians, continued in the King's bedchamber.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's devoted Servant

Henry Dalford.

Jan^y. 19. 1811.

Windsor Castle

The Bulletin to day is

His Majesty continues very much the same as He was yesterday.

Signed by

A. Reynolds
H. Halford
M. Baillie
W. Henderson
R. Willis -

Mr. H. Dalton

July 14. 1851

REC'D 16/1/194

Sir

I stated to your Royal Highness yesterday evening that the King had appeared more excited and more hurried in the course of the day than His Majesty had been lately. The King has slept about three hours and a half in the night at three several times, and has emerged this morning tho' with rather more eagerness in his manner, still more correctly than he did yesterday - The delusions resumed in the early part of the morning, but we have not met with them palpably at our visit -

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's

Faithful servant

Henry Balfour

Jan^y 20. 1810 9 o'clock

The Bulletin is as follows.

His Majesty appeared rather more indisposed in the course of yesterday - but is this morning as well as he was before.

Lu. H. Haldord
Jan 20th 1811.

1811

MED | 16 | 1 | 195

Windsor Castle

Jan: 21.

Sir

His Majesty did not pass a good day yesterday - His manner was hurried and the delusions were observed to recur frequently - The King has passed a quiet night - with nearly four hours sleep - and His conversation betrayed fewer errors - His Majesty's manner is quite mild and calm this morning and His whole deportment less exceptionable than we have noticed it lately.

I am, Sir, with high respect
 your Royal Highness's faithful
 Servant
 Henry Hallford.

Bulletin

His Majesty appears to be in a favorable state this morning.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged, yellowed paper]

Jan. 22. 1811

MSD/16/1/196

Dr Beattie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales
that his Majesty slept three hours last night - He was sometimes silent for a considerable time when awake, and sometimes talked - His Majesty's conversation through the night was generally correct, but sometimes mix'd with the usual delusion
- This morning while the Physicians were with his Majesty there was ^{no} report at the delusion whatever
- The Liver is beginning to secrete more Bile, and his Bowels are in a more natural state

Windsor Castle Jan: 22 - 1811

[Faint, illegible handwriting in cursive script, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

Bulletin -

His Majesty is quite as well this morning, as he was yesterday

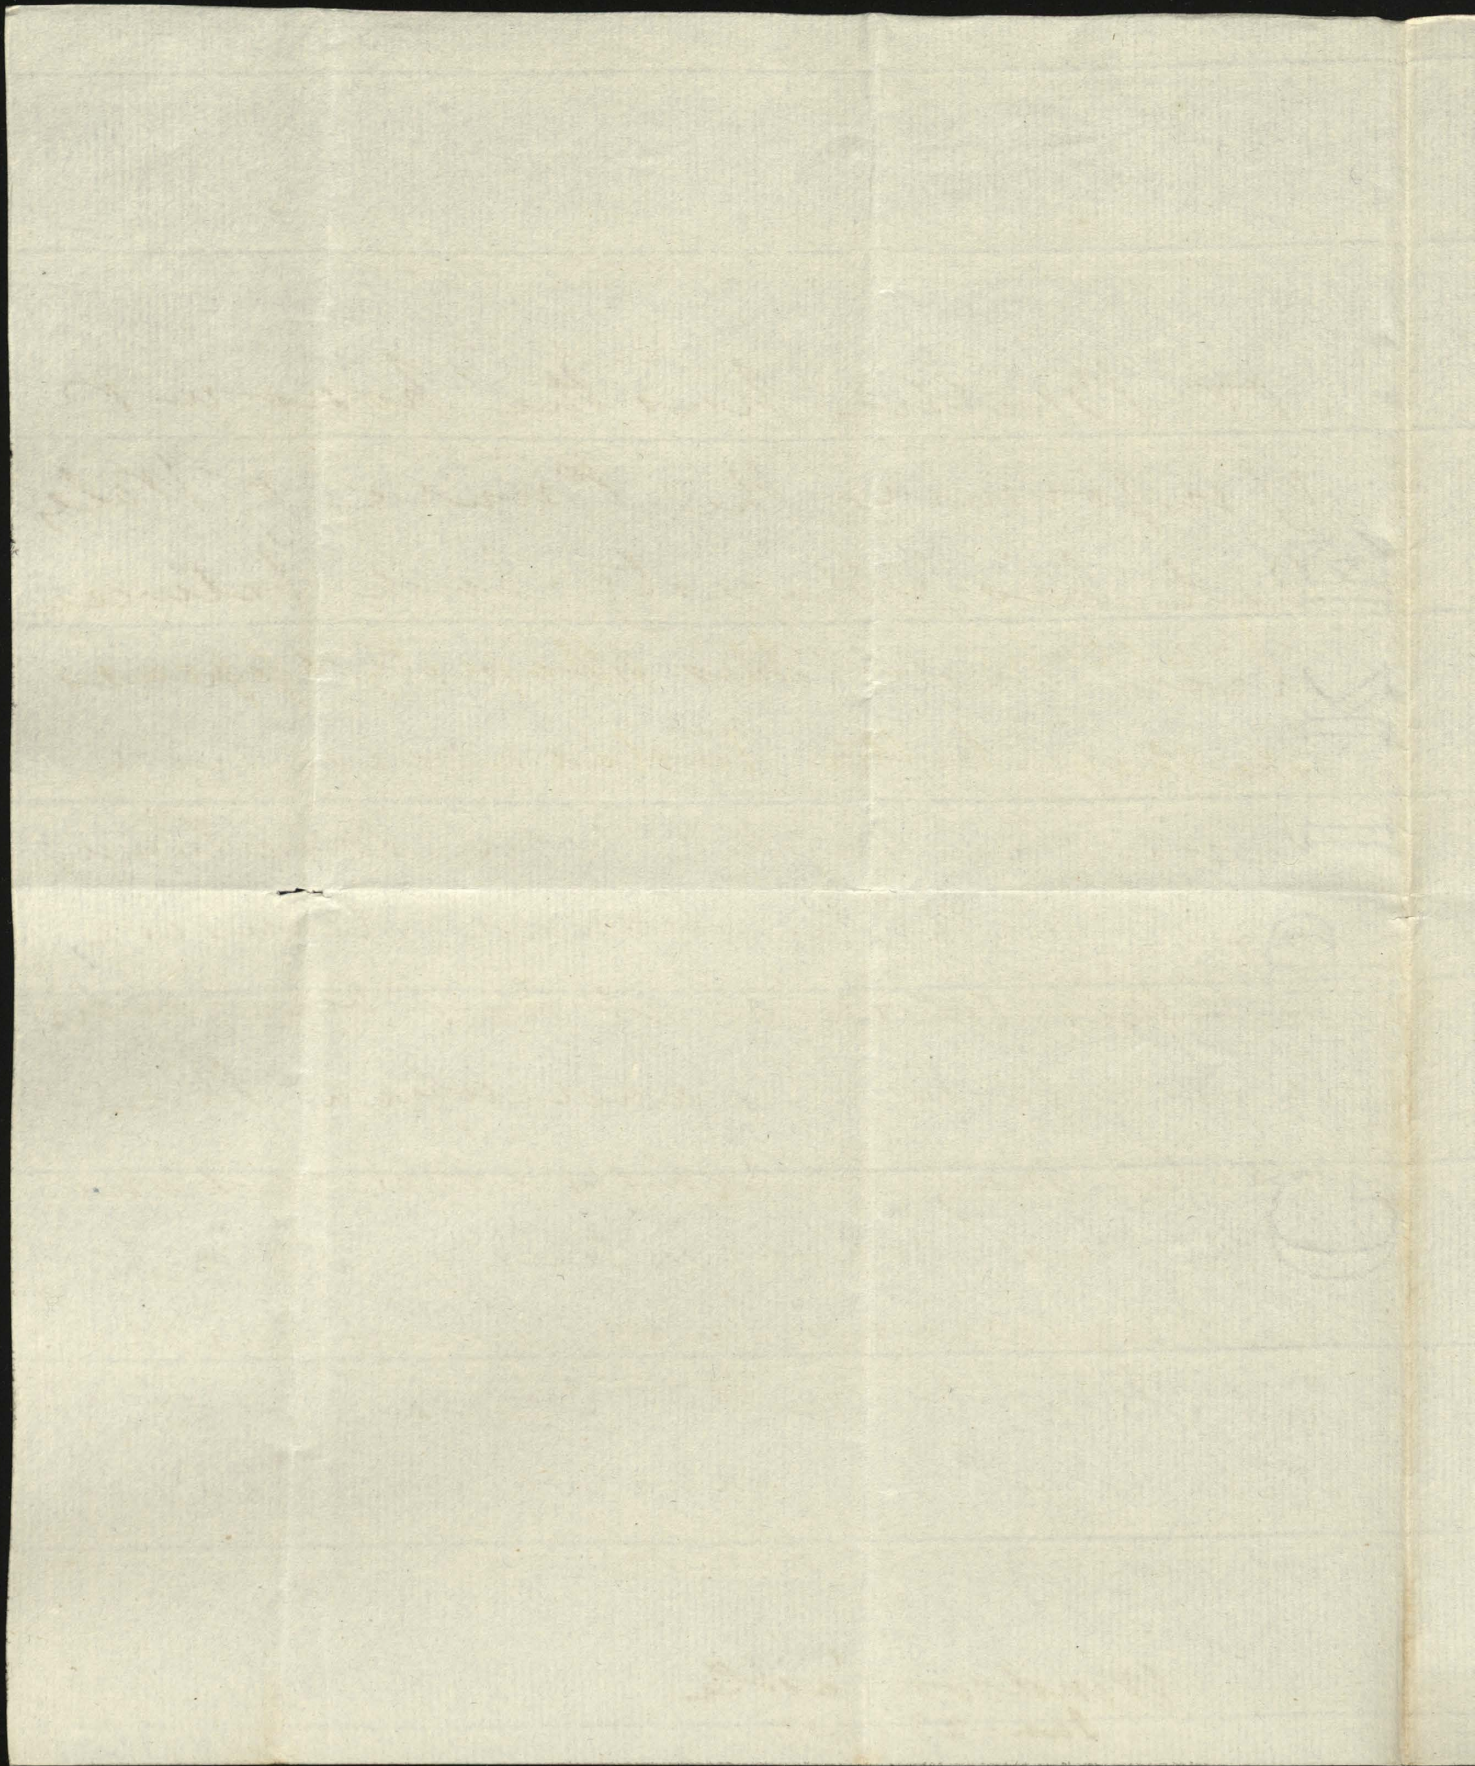

Doctor Baillie

Jan^y 22^d 1871

REC'D 16/1/197

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales that his Majesty had between three and four hours sleep in the night — His conversation during the night was sometimes mix'd with the usual delusions, but this morning it has been entirely free from it, and upon the whole may be consider'd as one of the best conversations which the Physicians have had with his Majesty in the course of this illness — The conversation lasted for nearly an hour —

Windsor Castle
Jan: 23 - 1811

Bulletin - His Majesty appears rather better today -

Dr Baillie
Jan 23^d 1811.

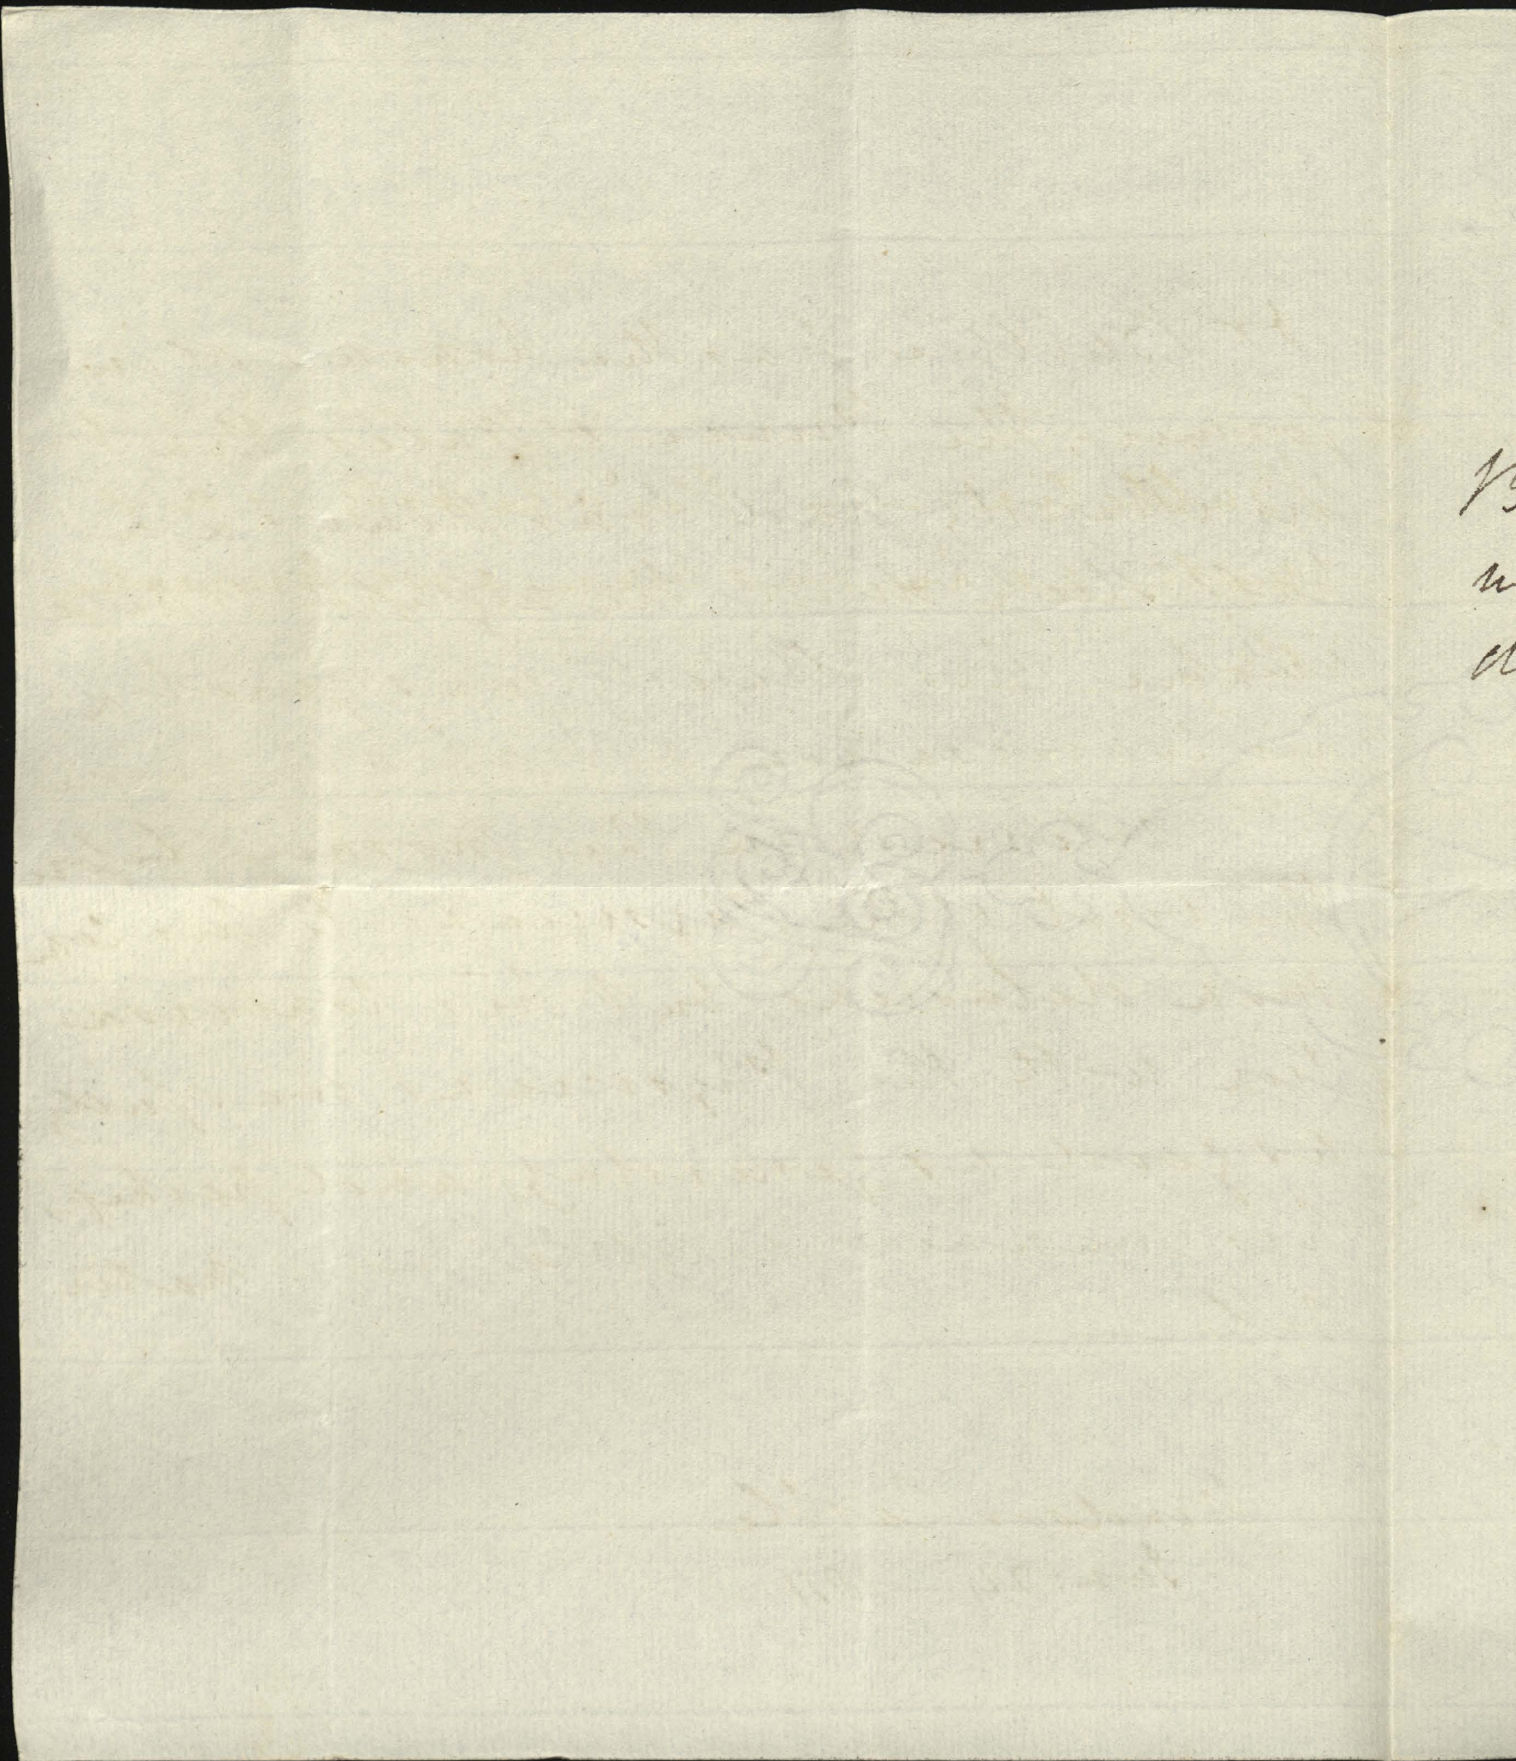

REC'D 16/1/198

Dr Bullie has the honour of informing the Prince of Wales, that his Majesty had four hours & a half sleep during the night - While awake his Majesty was quiet, & his conversation not at all hurried

He referred in the morning before the visit of the Physicians to his common delusions, but his conversation with the Physicians was fully as good as yesterday, and perhaps his manner a little more natural —

Windsor Castle

Jan: 24 — 1811

Bulletin — His Majesty is as well, as he has been any preceding day —

Dr. Baillie

Jan 24th 1811.

Jan 25. 1811

MSD/16/1/199

Sir

I was prevented from having the honor of writing to your Royal Highness yesterday morning by the King detaining me much longer than usual.

It is a mixed account I have to write to your Royal Highness this day - but one in which I think, on the whole, the good is predominant. His Majesty's manner was very mild and tranquil throughout yesterday, and His night has been a quiet one, tho' the King has pass'd but three hours and a half in sleep. The delusions recur'd very now and then in the course of the day, and I heard them, having set up myself, frequently in the early part of this morning - but at our visit ~~at~~ the usual hour his Majesty's conversation was more remarkable for a degree of hurry and impudence in the choice of the subjects of it, than for the misconceptions and errors which have characterized the King's complacent. The termination, however, of his Majesty's discourse was extremely satisfactory, as expressing in a fervent and most natural manner his affection for the Queen, and the whole of the Royal Family.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect your Royal Highness's

faithful humble servant

Henry Halford.

Windsor Castle

to
Jan: 25. 1811.

Mr. H. Holford

July 25th 1811

Jan: 26- 1811

MSO 16/1/200

Sir

I hasten to inform you that His Majesty that the Lord Chancellor and Mr Percival saw His Majesty to day, and were with the King an hour and a half. I do not know more of what passed than what satisfies me that the Ministers saw His Majesty in his real state, and that they have formed the same opinion of the King's state of mind exactly, which the Physicians by their reports, have endeavoured to give them - His Majesty certainly spoke rather than heard, and I believe they were not able to induce firm to attend to the particular object of their visit, an exposition of the state of the nation, which had produced the necessity of the measures now pending in Parliament.

I am pleas'd with the expectation of waiting upon your Royal Highness at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning - according to your Royal Highness's commands, and am, Sir, most respectfully
your Royal Highness's faithful

humble servant

Henry Balfour

I am just returned from Windsor

Sir

The King has had about three hours sleep in the night, and His Majesty passed the rest of his time very quietly. Mr Dundas who sat up, heard nothing of the delusions in the course of the night, nor have the Physicians at their visit this morning noticed them at all. They heard, however, several times yesterday, particularly in the evening.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect your Royal Highness's
 Faithful Servant

Windsor Castle

Henry Balfour

Jan^y. 26. 1811.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged paper]

REC D 16/1/202

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales
that his Majesty had five hours sleep during last night - His conversation has been occasionally
mix'd with the usual delusions while awake - This morning his Majesty's conversation with the Physicians had no tinge of delusion in it, but was a little more frivolous than it ^{has} often been of late

Windsor Castle
Jan: 27 - 1811

[Faint, illegible cursive handwriting on aged paper]

TED 16 11 203

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales that his Majesty had four hours and a quarter sleep in the night — During yesterday his Majesty's conversation was more frivolous than it has lately been, and even occasionally indelicate, but this morning the conversation has been fully as good as any which has occurred during the present illness —

Windsor Castle

Jan: 20 — 1871

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged, yellowed paper]

Jan. 29. 1811

Sir

I have the satisfaction of informing your Royal Highness that Mr Perceval has communicated to His Majesty the account of the proceedings of Parliament respecting the King's illness.
That His Majesty heard all with composure, and contentment - & expressed His satisfaction with the conduct of Ministers in having acted upon this necessary provision - and being assured by Mr Perceval in answer to a question put by His Majesty that your Royal Highness's conduct had been so respectful and so affectionate, was pleas'd to the greatest degree.

In fact, I thought from Mr Perceval's account (for no person was present at the interview but himself) it probably had an influence in reconciling the King to see the business in so proper a light — God bless you.

Sir! With the most sincere wishes for your Royal Recovery, fame and happiness, I am Sir,
Your Royal Highness
Loyal Servant
J. Wat

Henry Watford.

2 o'clock

Secretary
29 January 1871.

MS. A. 1. 1. 1. 205

Sir

The King passed a good day yesterday - and has slept about four hours and a half in the course of the night - No reference has been observed since His Majesty went to bed to the errors of his mind, and the King's conversation with the Physicians this morning has appeared more like his usual way than we have observed it before. The King did not speak of the Queen or any part of the Royal Family, nor did he allude to Politics - but asked some questions about Spain, on which he made some pertinent remarks.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Balford.

M. I find the Renewal is expected at Windsor either today or tomorrow, in order to attempt again to explain to the King the necessity of The measures now going on in Parliament.

Jan 29. 1811.

Bulletin

His Majesty goes on favorably.

In H. Haldor
Jan 24th 1881.

Jan 30. 1811

MEG 11611/205A

Sir

Mr Perceval saw the King yesterday in order to explain to His Majesty the necessity of the measures now passing in Parliament - and we have no reason to think that the King has suffered any disadvantage from the communication. His Majesty slept about five hours last night. His manners and conversation are too eager and rapid this morning - and the latter not altogether free from the delusion about Hanover; but the King has adverted to the occasion of Mr Perceval's visit with apparent satisfaction - I am Sir, with the highest respect and attachment, your Royal Highness

Faithful Servant

Henry Balford.

Buckham -

Jan: 30. 1811.

His Majesty continues as well as He was yesterday.

Mr H. Walford

Jan 30th 1844.

Dr Baillie has the honour
of informing the Prince of Wales that his Majesty had three hours and a quarter sleep during last night — While awake he talked less than usual, & his conversation was free from delusion — This morning his Majesty's conversation with his Physicians was free from delusion, but his manner a very little more hurried than it has sometimes been — During yesterday
his Majesty's conversation was a little mix'd with the usual error

Windsor Castle Jan 31 - 1811

