My dear Brother I take up my pen to say that now that the King is informed of your Amalia's will, I hope you will bear the burden the next time you see the Queen to make her sensible as well as every one of the family of the necessity and propriety of ~~disposing~~ disposing the subject for ever, & make them all feel it is what we owe to poor Amalia's memory - nothing should God ever have taken it more properly than the King & he feels as he ought your conduct in the occasion - & I trust & hope no questions will be asked ~~at~~ at any conversation should take place. I am sure you will strongly recommend nothing more being said but that we were not ignorant that your Amalia preferred him to all others - the saying any more upon every subject (which after all can only be conjecture) is the most horrid of all things & can see my opinion only make mischief & yet not be proved. The object of this letter my dear Mother is to express that you will use that language the very first opportunity you have to provide as you must be aware an unguarded word dropped by the Queen may ~~cause~~ bring in a thousand unpleasant things & I am sure no night to let her out in Peace Love & a few her words be silent as to my

O my dear Mother
