Soon after my letter went off the Queen I suppose thought better & she told Augustus she would allow her &
 I only to go to Ballinacorney to summer & that as she wanted to speak to you on business she should go with Horace & we went accordingly —

I took this opportunity of giving my usual struggle to my two elder sisters & this little ~~thing~~ ^{trial} must prove to them we decided we would be for nothing would have carried this subject of my sisters going but my being undecided the telling me I would have no answer to send you unmercifully & that at all costs if she refused our going she must do so herself —

I will not say a word about but coming myself in my own room disappointment. I was not very because I felt sure she would not let me go - but I will say for sure - As to the poem Henry he has passed a bad day but quite as well as as yesterday because no not a word was called for but a violent storm took place this evening at 4 o'clock that was dreadful in every respect - he went to bed greatly quite fatigued & complaining of cold
 He was out a sleep when I awoke some up as the Queen seems poor Sophia is in a most delicate state & really quite unfit to undertake a long drive as to ballants & such again it is the Queen's preference that she should not out of charity spare her & leave out more - Sophia of course delighted to go, but somewhat she is quite unfit to go a few & of her with the King when you see how she will tell you how out of health she is of course this is quite for you only -
