

Oct - the 8th

My dear Papa
 I take the liberty of troubling you again to day with a few lines to say that our dear Amelia is certainly better for the bleeding yesterday & does not appear at all worser for all she suffered & went through yesterday the discharges of the Spices was a good deal I never remember her in all this long illness suffering more pain, but thank God the paper to day is enterprised with the discharge it has produced I desire you to say in your next letter to Mr. Bayle before he had sleep'd the side ~~the~~ morning & as I was writing to you did not open your letter

To add how much pleased he is with the appearance of the piece as he did not take to depend on the propriety of informing you of this pleasing intelligence I do not likewise intend now to add that he shall be at London for certain Tuesday evening but to borrow as he has promised Comelia to stay to drop her side before he goes which will make him out not an hour or two later than he first intended - The wind now from the side is as yet just the same & the night has been but independent

Your Dutiful & aff
