

My first thoughts this morning are turned towards you my beloved & ever dear Tom Gray & I only wish instead of sending you this note that I could fly & join you at dear dear Sage at breakfast, but such a prospect as still forbid me from, as I must have re: course to my own to convey all my say to you - Sweet love how happy I am that yesterday is over; no more was I so fatigued & all day feel so ill that from my head to my heels I know not a spot free from pain; the weight of the clothes almost restored my poor stomach & just now I feel a perfect rag, but always a warm heart towards you - Sage was most amiable, for the first person I saw was him down down down; it was a mercy that I behaved as well as I did, for as I saw the same propensity to shake hands with him as he has with me I was within the point of clawing back of him when a sudden fit of despondency seized him & his Flour was off - I embark for the two notes I received from Perrot. The first mentioned N. & I got just after in London on Thursday & the 2^d yesterday - I feel quite happy that I did as I did, for both Perrot & by N. a completely consistent them : above & have what indeed I never could doubt that the whole are a political flour; it may be for Stations but has not just come, & the hinder the Perrot N. is to me the same decision I was of hesitating in my own horrible ~~state~~ flour, happy if I can oblige & decisions of being civil, but not unwise the least popularity & whether my bill self of course, for will return them my sweet love when we meet which I hope this in my or in our interests; it all worth I hope I may have a line from one of you very soon during my stay, it will See my to my some that was here said to a delight in you may be some time I have for; tell George that I want to know from him & that he may feel some if I find he is talking to the wind that I will not deny it; — I forget for I really am as ill as yesterday evening if I told George that the Ed talked to me at the George garden, to him, & said he had told me I was here joined & that she might ask my divine as he was some I had been right, this frightened me though I believe I did tell you that he had said so to me seriously; however I showed up courage & replied, that the H. was the first to me, ^{but} that is for he did me justice in saying I'd make no mistake; that I feared I was talking a great liberty, but that as she asked me I could not help saying her name to tell the H. any thing of the B.'s kindheartedness for that though I was joined it being her own affair she had been going on for some time just like the H. must be some of them would have been it was that the H. & B. should be into together, she did not take it so & I only hope this was not saying the word - I have some very fine & odd, 1000 Billion's Affectionate love to my dear dear George, my blessing to my Darling Agnes & to your dear children, & being for the most part ever dear with of every sentiment of the most unutterable & inexpressible affection of your ever Loving

Excuse me for the trouble - without any other help which I am sure you, I do not mean that such a little bit of Agnes?
has been in order that she is a silly one.
I am to inform or pleased with the entire taken of her -

And bless you -

I think you will be very beautiful

By the way - I hope I may hear of you: dear dear dear dear -
