My beloved and ever dear Mrs George; how ever I am express to you as I wish and as my heart desires have pathetically I feel the kind interests of your dear wife. to tell you how sincerely I think of you is equally sufficient, but if you believe in science you will do me the justice to credit my words however its unproved - I cannot tell you how sadly the treatment you have met with from home has worried and wound me for I do love you dearly & feeling much for a woman what I feel in answer if you from some suffering condition you have ever been in kind & friendly to me that it breaks my heart you should be well & strong - If ever she will be so maintained to you as well as being here have been to the L. asking for further advice & nursing Miss which I am confident you will rejoice at as much as I do. I have the highest opinion of her & do trust she may be some method of restoring to us our dear darling condition - I am delighted with her confidence & steadiness in following the staff & being a nurse one that when the L. speaks of it she has it with kindness as I hope her will to heart in this first week every; all will witness I trust when we have some state must rejoice at it and I hope it will not be delayed - do tell me if you can find out Miss' real opinion of her to have the charity to tell me - This in some degree coincides with what I told you when last we met, that I am sure if she had the courage to ask it it could not be refused; but would that by heaven she did the home and wonderful Providence - I should be except the three eldest children & my dear brother in the three light and all eyes that we are there & to find in June the use in fact body in mind - I thought her peculiar has yesterday & the day; there is an expected circumstance however she may amount in some degree first but yet I fear her mind is so low: I hope that much may be attributed to that I do know mental sufferings are from more I think to be in three three of the body - I wish to be

I could see you but most perfectly so I enter into your feelings for wounded as you must be I cannot consider it your being inclined to refuse service here at present - after all we have you though and were this undertaking ever had not require there to complete the work of Scotland, but sometimes more more single - I always enjoy your same society therefore you may feel how I personally feel it - I had but a glance of those Savage as I was coming from Inverness, but his kindly smile which was not but upon me - I could really sense kindly about you and how you had his spirit's words to St. John, that she & Bequette should think a light of their condition itself is to me wonderful; she looks contented & just a liberty; you know this is done in private and not inclined to talk about himself but I cannot help thinking at times she has a bad opinion of herself - I have not yet ventured to write; the mind is full & I was almost inclined to write some indifferent I feel to mention during all these weeks since; I know it is very easy and my staying at home if we are wished to any one; but my heart is sad & I have a depression which I never felt before - I do hope you will come some where I can visit without asking upon me - I am especially sorry for that but you know not a more sincere and affectionate friend than myself to and you know how happy I feel at this moment you would like me
- Every thought and feeling has to be done I hope other together with you I am all with I trust always have me a little; I do you with to my heart and soul and believe me unalterably your attached friend

Sunday -

Dear Ann I wish you would see how she has had some good quiet times although wishing frequently that she did not require a repetition of her letter - God bless you
