Charlotte,

Dec 9th 1805,

My dear Miss Hunt,

I really have no excuse to make for not having ac- knowledged your kind letter before, I can only beg your pardon for my inattention; and hope you will forgive it.

Let me request however that you will not suppose I am ingrateful to you for your good advice, because I have not written to thank you for it. I assure you I shall always remember it, and think with gratitude on you, and all those who have done me the kindness to tell me of my faults.

It would make me very happy, my dear Miss Sturt, if I thought I should have the pleasure of seeing you again: but as your health obliges you to live in Devonshire, and as I have no chance of travelling so far Westward I know not how to hope for that gratification: where ever you are believe me that I wish you both well, and happy.

Pray have the kindness to tell me how Mr. Hunt is, and offer him my best Compliments. Remember me to Mrs. Boudler, should you see her, and tell her I do not forget her.
