

delivered to H. R. H. The Princess Mary - June 1804 -

If you give way in some things not essential, & suggest matters in such a way that the K. imagines the first thought was his own you may easily attain your point.

attempt to keep every thing in order without ever having a squabble.

Let Him repose his Grievances real or imaginary in the bosoms of his family - let their arms be open to receive him - their Ears to hear his plaints - their Voice to sooth his sorrow - and let him perceive by every action, by every look, by every word of theirs that their hearts bleed for him.

Coercion is & will I fear for a time be necessary - There must be a Power existing somewhere to superintend or All will be lost -

2 pp. Memorandum, entitled: 'Deliver'd to H.R.H. The Princess Mary, June 1804. - If you give way in some things not essential, & suggest Matters in such a way that the K. (Geo. III) imagines the first thought was his own, You may easily attain your point. Attempt to keep every thing in order without every having a squabble. Let Him repose his Grievances real or imaginary in the bosoms of his family - let their arms be open to receive him - their Ears to hear his plaints - their Voice to sooth his sorrow - and let him perceive by every action, by every look, by every words of theirs that their hearts bleed for him. Coercion is & will I fear for a time be necessary. There ~~must be a Power existing somewhere to superintend or All will be lost -~~

~~But let that Coercion proceed from those whom it hath pleased God to call to the arduous Situation, in wch They are placed about his M. May every other Consideration with them, whether of advantage or of danger, shrink before the heartfelt satisfaction of having conscientiously performed their Duty to ther King & to their Country.~~

But let that Coercion proceed from those whom It hath pleased God to call to the arduous Situation in w^{ch} They are plac'd about his M.

May every other Consideration with them, whether of advantage or of danger shrink before the heartfelt Satisfaction of having conscientiously performed their Duty to their King & to their Country —