

As the preparing Lectures on Modern History must require time it is not unreasonable that the first course be deferred for two years, but after that it must be read once every year.
What is proposed for thirteen lectures ought to be contracted into the first lecture, very proper as one of the volume the four volume lectures The ~~second~~ lecture ought to be the first of the course of the ~~second~~ volume very proper as the second volume the thirteenth very proper as the second lectures which is to consist of ~~at least~~ of fifty.
The History of England is ^{essential} ~~an~~ a part of every young Education that it is supposed every man will pursue it and make the ~~four~~ volume lecture.
Therefore it ought not to make any part of these lectures but in ~~comparing~~ ^{comparing} it with the other states.
And the proposed enquiry into the Legislature is no part of this plan, for that is now so fully mastered by the Genevan Lectures.
