Report of the Seventieth Regiment of Foot Commanded by Col: Cyrus Trapaud Reviewed at Canterbury by Lieutenant General His Grace the Duke of Argyll 1761.

Officers..... Properly armed - Salute well - very attentive to their Duty - Their Uniforms Good.

Men..... Grenadier company of a very good Height and complete - The Battalion in general of a middling Size but strong and well made - The Non Commissioned Officers do their Duty well - The Serjeants have Sashes.

Exercise..... Very well performed, as likewise their Wheelings and Marching, and their several Firings in proper time.

Arms..... Very Good and Clean.

Accoutrements..... Excessively good and properly fitted.

Cloathing..... Very good and well appointed.

Accounts..... Kept according to Your Majesty's Regulations.

Complaints..... Not any.

Recruited since last Review..... } Very well made Young Men.

In General..... This Regiment is low in Number, owing to repeated Draughts being made from them: But there seems to have been great Pains taken with them in regard to their Discipline.

In General This Regiment is very well Disciplined, well appointed, and both Officers and Men very attentive to their Duty. It wants Numbers to complete, owing to many of the Private Men having served their Three Years and demanded their Discharges. These Men have not as yet been replaced by the Deputy Lieutenants of the County of Surrey.

Sire,

Having Ordered Lieutenant General Kingsley to Review the Cheshire and Huntingdonshire Regiments of Militia encamped in Chatham Lines, and one Battalion of the Norfolk Militia Quarters in the Barracks there, The Lieutenant General has made a very favourable Report of these Regiments to me with regard to their being well disciplined and well appointed, and both Officers and Soldiers very attentive to their Duty: But each of these Regiments want a few Men to complete to the Establishment.

All which I have the Honour most humbly to lay before your Majesty.
