My dear Greenwood

I hasten to return to you my sincere thanks for the letter I have this day had the pleasure of receiving from you, and for your obliging communication respecting my friend Lord Hastings, from which I flatter myself that that excellent man is doing well, and that his valuable life will be preserved Very sensibly do I feel the warm interest you have the goodness to take in every thing that concerns me & the kindness displayed in the very satisfactory conversation you had last week respecting me, for which I have to offer to you my best acknowledgements -

I greatly regret that the Duke of York suffers so much pain, but on Thursday last I had a letter from Sir Henry Halliday giving a very favorable account of him in which he says that the Pain is the usual & unavoidable consequence of the necessary Process of separation of the wound from the unround parts and that the healing process has never been interrupted by it!

I am very glad to find that the same I had the satisfaction of sending you a word safe never before. My dear friend of the very sincere attachment & esteem with which I am

Most truly Yours

William Frederick
